Rotary President, Delos Hooper, Pays Tribute To Dr. Hunter

The following tribute by Rotary president, Delos Hooper, to the memory of the late Dr. H. T. Hunter, member of the Sylva club, was given at the memorial service for the deceased, held Tuesday in Hoey auditorium at Cullowhee:

Speaking in behalf of the Sylva Rotary Club we have sustained an irreparable loss in the demise of Ty Hunter, one of the most outstanding Rotarians of the state. Being a member of this club nearly twenty years, his presence and great leadership has been as a guiding star pointing us to and emulating that great slogan of Rotary, "Service Above Self," and with all his dealings and associations with his fellowman, no one can contradict the fact of that being one of the great high-lights of his life. With a generous and willing heart he gave his all in real service to his fellow-man.

He has faithfully and loyally served the club in every capacity up to and including the presidency. With such fine work in his local club he soon won great admiration from many other clubs, and in recognition of his unselfish work in Rotary he was elected Governor of the 190th District of Rotary International which comprised most of South Carolina and Western North Carolina.

In thus doing was the greatest joy of his life and every one far and near learned to love and admire such a great servant of mankind.

Truly we lost much and it is now our opportunity to push harder that object he so much cherished.

We, who are living, do not understand and did not properly evaluate his physical infirmities, free to use them in the most convenient way," the authors conclude. "If, however, extra labor, fencing and watering places are needed for rotational grazing, then continuous grazing would be more practical." EXPERIMENT STATION RELEASES BULLETIN

Experiments conducted by two North Carolina scientists prove that rotational grazing on native ranges is not practical.

Results of the experiments conducted have been released in a bulletin by the North Carolina Agriculture Experiment Station.

H. H. Biswell, of the Southeastern Forestry Experiment Station, and J. E. Foster of the Agriculture Experiment Station, conducted their experiments at the Blainland Branch Station from 1942 to 1944. Though the tests were hampered by wild fires, enough experimental lands were unaffected to complete the experiments.

The study was designed to test two kinds of rotational grazing and compare their results to those of continuous grazing. One set of plots was grazed continuously, a second was grazed for 28 days then rested for 28 days, and a third set

In their conclusions, the authors state that the three systems of grazing gave about the same reand it is now our responsibility to pick up the torch he so brilliantly displayed in making this a better world in which to live.

And now I can not refrain from paraphrasing this fine tribute to such a GREAT MAN:

"In the book of life on its pages of old His virtues are traced in letters of gold; Each kindly act and good deed done Is there recorded one by one. In memory sweet like a ribbon-gay Entwine the record of noble deeds Reverently remembering our beloved and honored TL HUNTER."
