NOW'S TIME TO GET PROPER SEED PLATES

Growers of hybrid corn should arrange now, rather than the day corn is to be planted, for installing the proper size of seed plates, says Dr. R. P. Moore, head of the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association.

Corn hybrids, Dr. Moore said, are sold by grades which may require special seed plates. Since high yields require good stands, special attention must be given to the selection of the proper plates.

Many farmers rework the cells of either old or new seed plates in order to get an accurate seed drop, Dr. Moore states. When checking the correctness of seed plates, he added, the farmer should adjust the cell sizes so that the largest kernels of corn present will be planted without difficulty. If this adjustment is made, the smaller kernels in the grade will likely cause no trouble, especially in well-graded lots of corn.

"Luck is not a substitute for the proper plates, nor is it a good farming partner," Dr. Moore declared. "Many seed manufacturers are willing to help farmers select the proper seed plates upon request. Farmers, however, must be willing to help themselves. If a good stand is not dropped, don't expect a good stand to come up."
