

Knoxville Schools Want More WCTC Teacher Graduates
 CULLOWHEE—The Knoxville public schools like graduates of Western Carolina Teachers college as teachers, and want more of them.
 Miss Charlotte Watson, instructor in the fine and industrial arts department of W. C. T. C., said that that is what the elementary supervisor of the Knoxville public schools told her recently, at the Southeastern Arts Convention, held in Columbia, S. C., April 8, 9, and 10.

 "I have a teacher," said the supervisor, "Mrs. Maggie Sandlin Crisp, who was recently graduated from W. C. T. C., and who is doing wonderful work. The college at Cullowhee is doing things for beginning teachers that even the big universities are not doing. We have to teach many of our beginning teachers things that Western Carolina graduates already know, such as manuscript writing."

Miss Watson said that the supervisor told her that he was interested in W. C. T. C. graduates, and had mentioned the college favorably to his board. He said that the Knoxville public schools pay beginning teachers more than $2,000 a year. "Tell the students at Western Carolina who are planning to teach to come to Knoxville and apply to the City Superintendent," he told Miss Watson.
