Avoid Sun Stroke And Heat Exhaustion
 With the approach of high temperatures and the rush of the harvesting season it is easy to be overcome by heat illness, says H. M. Ellis, in charge of Extension Agricultural Engineering at State College.
 When heat illness strikes it can be serious, sometimes fatal, Mr. Ellis said. Be on the guard against heat sickness and take the necessary precautions this summer to avoid over-exposure to the sun or prolonged physical exertion in extreme heat.
 Heat exhaustion and sun stroke are two entirely different things, even though both may seem to result from exposure to high external heat. With heat exhaustion, the patient's skin is cold and clammy—while with sun stroke, the skin is not and dry. A simple rule may serve as a guide and avoid confusion regarding the treatment. Briefly, it is this: If the patient is cold, make him warm; if he is hot,

JOHNSTON FARMERS PRAISE WEED KILLER
 Use of 2,4-D chemical weed killer has proved to be both practical and profitable for two Johnston County farmers, reports John E. P. Land, county agent for the State College Extension Service.
 They are J. L. Matthews, Route 1, Clayton, and L. A. Martin, Route 1, Princeton.
 When heavy rains prevented the growers from doing the usual amount of plowing in late May, their corn fields soon became covered with cockleburrs and other broad-leaved weeds. In some places the weeds were so high that no corn could be seen.
 Facing the prospect of having to turn out their corn or else plow it up, the farmers decided to treat their fields with the new chemical. They used the recommended amounts of 2,4-D, and followed approved practices. As a result, they obtained perfect control of all broad-leaved weeds.
 Mr. Martin has about 10 acres of corn which he was able to save in this way. Mr. Matthews, who has 18 acres, said he used only
