NEW DORMITORIES NEARING COMPLETION AT N. C. STATE COLLEGE

Raleigh, N. C., July 27—The two new dormitories, pictured above, are nearing completion at N. C. State College and will be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the institution's next academic term in September. The buildings, valued at $1,100,000, were begun by the N. C. State College Foundation, which borrowed the money for the project from the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company after obtaining approval for the construction work from the board of trustees and the council of State. The 1947 General Assembly appropriated funds to pay the Foundation for the buildings. Owen is shown on the left, and Tucker Hall is pictured on the right.

STATE EDUCATION GROUP URGES A CHANGE IN METHODS OF TRAINING

Durham Man Suggests 8 Points Which Would Improve Calibre of Teachers

An eight-point program has been suggested by a State Education commission group to combat what it calls an urgent need for improved teacher education in North Carolina, it was learned here today.

The program was proposed by the teacher education committee headed by W. M. Jenkins of the Durham county schools.

"Strong attacks" should be launched to do these eight things, the committee said.

1. Professionalize teacher education.
2. Select and secure good candidates.
3. Equip colleges to do professional preparation of beginners.
4. Provide continuation education.
5. Develop qualified leadership.
6. Improve organization and administration.
7. Improve certification.
8. Provide for statewide planning.

The report to The State Education commission says that some 3,000 qualified white elementary teachers must be secured this fall from places other than teacher training schools in the state.

It continues: "It is necessary to emphasize the fact that the day has passed when any college graduate can teach. A great deal is known today about how to teach. As much is known about the technique of teaching reading as about the technique of removing the appendix . . . Changing the teacher education into professional education cannot be done overnight but a strong beginning in that direction should be immediate."

To professionalize teacher education, the committee found, three things must be done: more rigid criteria for accrediting colleges must be estimated and enforced; responsibility for operating teacher education must be concentrated within each college, and the approved colleges must evolve really professional curricula.

The report says that there is a real need for younger, more vigorous teachers and increased institutions. It adds that the problem of recruiting good personnel for teacher education institutions is difficult and "will remain so until salaries and teaching conditions for these professional workers have been improved."

THIS IS NATIONAL FARM SAFETY WEEK

President Truman calls for the elimination of 30,000,000 farm hazards in his fourth proclamation of National Farm Safety Week, July 25-31.

Last year the lives of over 18,000 farm people were cut short. Accidents robbed them of their normal life expectancy of nearly a half million man years. And the loss of time from injuries could have produced over one-half of the nation's wheat crop.

In setting the dates for the 5th observance President Truman emphasized the goal to be achieved.

"I urgently request each member of every American farm family to accept responsibility for elimination of at least one possible
