Gainesville Hatchery To Furnish Blood Tested Chicks And Assistance

Jackson County Farmers and Poultrymen moved a step nearer the starting of a huge program for the production of quality hatching eggs Tuesday afternoon when 150 farm men and women gathered in the courtroom of the county courthouse to hear L. A. Chemell, owner and manager of the Gainesville Broiler Hatchery, explain the program and who answered many questions put to him by the farmers about the program. Mr. Chemell spoke frankly, explaining both the good and bad sides connected with the industry. He proved to the group that there is good money to be made in the production of quality hatching eggs, and he stressed QUALITY, provided the farmer gives the business the proper aftention. His hatchery will furnish the farmer with day old or 10 x coss old pulle's which are bood to ted. He also provides the grower with a feeding program, and turnishes roosters to the Heck owners. In addition he has field men ready to help the flock owners with their problems in getting started, or if VA has advised that special ap- needed-information will be fur-
