MRS. B. E. GRAY DEDICATES BOOK OF FAVORITE RECIPES TO MRS. MCKEE

"Favorite Recipes from Famous People" is a 100-page book filled with mouth-watering recipes contributed mostly by residents of North Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi. The first section of the book is devoted to recipes given by many nationally-known public figures from every part of the United States.

From Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt came the secret of making Dutch omelet, those delicious golden puffs of fruit dumplings, full of citron, currents and little raisins. The late Mrs. Sara Roosevelt sent from Hyde Park her recipe for clam or fish chowder. President Truman's wife contributed her recipe for a tuna and noodle casserole, excellent for a one-dish luncheon.

Many governors of states gave their recipes for long favored dishes, as did their wives. Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia described the correct way to make corn pone. Old-fashioned salt rising bread also has its place.

Every page has recipes that make the reader anxious to try them out at once; and the book in its entirety breathes of the spice and generous fragrance of Southern cookery at its best.

The book is dedicated to the late Gertrude Dills (Mrs. E. Lyndon) McKee of Sylva, who died on November 28, 1948. In a foreword to the volume, U. S. Senator Clyde R. Hoey recalls that Mrs. McKee was the first woman to be elected and to serve as Senator in the General Assembly of North Carolina. Senator Hoey says, "Her record as Senator added to her reputation as a leader of ability and vision, and her achievements in legislative matters made a distinct contribution to her district and state."

Mrs. B. E. (Minnie Dills) Gray of Dillsboro, sister of Mrs. McKee, edited and compiled the recipes. She began work some years ago in Louisiana, and completed it at Dillsboro. Proceeds from sale of the book, which costs $2, will be divided between Jackson County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs and the Palmer Orphanage at Columbus, Miss. The books will be sold through the agency of various clubs in North Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi.

ESSAY CONTEST ON THE CHEROKEES

At recent meetings held with librarians from western North Carolina, together with individuals connected with the Cherokee Drama which is to be held this summer, plans have been discussed for ways of stimulating interest in reading about the Cherokees and in the drama itself. It has been decided that each county will hold an essay contest. The contests are being sponsored by the libraries. Judges are to be a local club or community committee.

There are to be prizes for the five best essays in each county, the prizes to be as follows:

1st prize—5 tickets to the Cherokee Drama

2nd prize—4 tickets to the Cherokee Drama

3rd prize—3 tickets to the Cherokee Drama

4th prize—2 tickets to the Cherokee Drama

5th prize—1 ticket to the Cherokee Drama

A committee of judges for Jackson County has not yet been selected. Further announcements about this will come later.

Rules for the contest are as follows:

1. The essay may be any length scholarship, and campus activities. He is a native of Greenbrier County, West Virginia, where his father introduced 4-H Club work and was county agent for many years.

Ford, who will work out of the extension forestry office at State College, is a graduate of the School of Forestry of Syracuse University. He was employed by a bag and paper company before joining the Extension Service in 1945 as farm forester in Wilkes, Surry, Yadkin, and Alexander Counties.

Ford took charge of extension forestry activities in the western district on July 1, 1948. Since that time he has developed a strong program with emphasis on tree planting and forestry demonstrations on TVA unit test farms.

One of Ford's main duties after he moves to Raleigh will be to promote forestry projects among 4-H Club members. Musser, who was an all-Southern Conference guard on the State College football team last fall, will serve as forestry instructor at the new 4-H camp at Waynesville this summer.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN FORESTRY STAFF

Two changes in the personnel of the forestry staff of the State College Extension Service were announced this week by John L. Gray, in charge of extension forestry work.

Charles A. Musser has been appointed extension forestry specialist for the western district, with headquarters in Asheville. He succeeds John E. Ford, who has been named assistant extension forester. The two are working together in some of the western counties at present, and Ford will remain in Asheville until Musser has become thoroughly acquainted with the district program.

Musser, a 4-H Club member for seven years, is a recent graduate of State College, where he made an outstanding record in athletics,
