Poultry producers of Jackson County joined together for a discussion of poultry management practices at the County Courthouse Tuesday morning of this week. The discussion was led by C. F. Parrish, Extension Poultry Specialist, Agricultural Extension

Mr. Parrish stressed good management of the flock as a means of increasing the margin between the selling price of eggs and the production costs. The Specialist offered the following recommendations as means of avoiding summer moults and gaining greatest production from the flock: (1) Supply the birds with plenty of fresh drinking water, (2) Keep the house comfortably cool, (3) Feed a good quality feed, and (4) Cullowhee - 106 students from light the house at night as a means
