Friendship and Death.

E desire for friendship is strong in every human heart. We crave the companionship of those who can understand. The nostalgia of life presses, we sigh for "home," and long for the presence of one who sympathizes with our aspirations, comprehends our hopes and is able to partake of our joys. A thought is not our own until we import it to another, and the confessional seems & crying need of every human sout.

One can bear greet, but it taxes two to be glad, We rea h the Divine through some one, and by dividing our joy with this one we would it, and come in touch with the Universal. The sky is never so blue, the birds never stay so blithely, our adquaintances are never so gracious as when we are alled with love for some one else. Being in harmon) with the we are in harmony with all. The lover idealizes and clothes the beloved with virtues that exist only in his imagination. The beloved is conselo six or unconsciously aware of this, and endeavors to fulfil the high ideal; and in the contemplation of the transcendent qualities that his mind has created the lover is raised to heights otherwise impossible.

Should the beloved pass from this earth while such a condition of exaltation exists, the ecuception is indelibly impressed upon the soul, just as the last earthly view is sald to be photographed upon the retina of the dead. The highest earthly relationship is in its very essence fleeting, for men are fallible; and living in a wirld where the material wants justle, and time and change play their ceaseless parts, gradual obliteration comes and distillusion enters. But the memory of a sweet affinity once fully possessed, and snapped by fate at its supremest moment, can never die from out the heart. All other troubles are awallowed up in this; and if the individual is of too stern a fibre to be completely crushed into the dust, time will come bearing healing, and the memory of that once ideal condition will chant in his heart a perpetual

And I hope the world has passed forever from the nightmare of pity for the dead, they have coused from their labors and are at rest.

But for the living, when death has entered and removed the best friend, fate has done her worst, the piummet has sounded the depths of grief, and thereafter nothing can insuite terror. At one fell stroke all petty annoyances and corroding cares are sunk into nethingness. The memory of a great love lives enshrined in undying amber. It affords a ballast 'gainst all the storms that blew, and, although it leads an unatterable sadness, it imparts an unspeakable was e. Where there is this haunting memory of a great love lost, there is also forgiveness, charity and somewhat that makes the man brother to all who suffer and endure. The individual himself is nothing; he has nothing to hope for nothing to less, nothing to win, and this constant memory of the high and eval of friendship that was once his is a neurishing source of strength; it constantly parifies the mind and inspires the heart to nobler flying and diviner thinking. The man is in communication with Elemental Con-

To have known an ideal friendship, and had it fade from your grasp and flee as a shadew before it is touched with sordid breath of selfishness, or sullied by rei-understanding is the highest good. And the constant dwelling in sweet and recollection on the exalted virtues of the one that is gone tends to crystallize these very virtues in the heart of him who meditates them.

CFFF T The Tight Collar Is Dangerous

By Dr. W. R. C. Latson.

E of the most common causes of hot weather discomfort-yea, and danger, too, for that matter-is the tight neckband. Passing up and down the sides of the neck are two very important arteries, the carotids, and two large veins, the jugular veins. The carotid arteries carry blood up to the head; while the jugular veins convey it back to the heart. As elsewhere in the body the arteries are situated under the muscles and so are partially protected from pressure. The Jagular veins, however, are quite near the surface. and a slight degree of pressure upon them is enough to impede the flow of blood away from the head. This retention of blood in the head is a frequent cause of that headache peculiar to hot weather, where the headache is accompanied by flushed face and feeling of fullness, often with buzzing in the ears. This condition, it may be mentioned, is always present in insolution, or "heat

Now the tight neckband and the tight coliar make pressure just over the jugular veins, and so by preventing free escape of blood from the head often produce "heat headaches," and other discomforts, as well as add to the risk of heat prostration.

The neckband of the summer shirt, then, should be loose, and the collar low and easy fitting. Happily this is now the rule with good dressers; so one can conserve his own comfort and safety without appearing odd or offending Madame Grundy.

American Feeling.

One Necessary in the Qualifications of Our Representatives Abroad.

By E S. Nadal.

minds have their attractions and their advantages, but I believe the American mind is not only kinder, but truer and juster and more in accord with the facts of life and human nature than the other. A cynically disposed person might say that this state of mind rests ultimately upon the fact that we all have something to sell one another. It may be so, but this state of mind nevertheless exists, and there can be no question that it is a just and sound If it be proper to mention the name of a man still living, there could hardly be a better example of the kind of mind an American representative abroad should have than Mr. Choate, who, I may add, had an even greater success in England than is perhaps generally known. He has a singular talent for being liked. There is one gift of his in which, I think, he is altogether peculiar; that of being successful without exciting envy.

Give the Children Sugar.

By Dr. Woods Hutchinson.

HILDREN may eat too much sugar and they may also stay too long in their bath tub, or in the creek when they go in swimming, or get tanned or a headache from playing too long in the sun, or chilled by staying too long in the open air; but is that any sound reason why they should be deprived of sweets, sunlight, baths and fresh air, or discouraged from indulging in them? All that is needed is a little common sense regulation and judicious supervision, no prohibition, or denunciation. Most of the extraordinary craving for pure sugar and candy, which is supposed to lead the average child to inevitably "founder himself" if left to his own sweet will and a box of candy, is due to a state of artificial and abnormal sugar starvation, produced by an insufficient amount of this invaluable food in its regular diet. Children who are given plenty of sugar on their mush, bread and butter, and puddings. a regular allowance of cake and plenty of sweet fruits, are almost free from this craze for candy, this tendency to gorge themselves to surfeit, and can usually be trusted with both the candy box and the sugar bowl.

The Antarctic Continent.

By Major-General Greely.

TRANGE have been the historical vicissitudes of the antarctic continent. A figment of geographic fancy evolved by Ortelius in 1570, the great Capt. Cook thought that he had demolished it in 1773. Resuscitated by an American sealer, N. B. Palmer, in 1820. it took form and definite location under Wilkes's daring and persistent explorations of 1840, supplemented by those of D'Urville, Enderby and Kemp. Ross eliminated Wilkes's discoveries from charts, but the continent was theoretically and scientifically reconstructed by the great physicists, Carpenter and Murray. Slowly evolving its tangible shape through the discoveries of the German Drygalski, the Scotsman Bruce, Beigian Gerlache, the Frenchman Charcot, the Norwegian Larsen and the dishman Scott, through the late labors of Shackleton, the antarctic continent appears to extend from Victoria Land west to Enderby Land, and from he's Land scroes the south pole to Palmer Land.

ANYHOW, WE HAVE THE POLAR STAR

-Cartoon by (). Williams, in the Indianapolis News.

NORTHCLIFFE TELLS WHY HE FEARS WAR

German Preparations of To-day Like Those Which Preceded the Confict With France---Britain Not Aroused Yet---Warnings of Leaders Fail Fully to Awaken the People.

lished here Lord Northcliffe, managing owner of a London newspaper, declares there is great danger of war between Germany and Great Britain.

"The Americans are so busy," said Lord Northcliffe, "with the affairs of ther own gigantic continent that they have not the time to devote to the study of European politics, which are more kaleidoscopic in their changes than are those of the United States. "There is an impression in this country that some hostility exists between the people of Great Britain and of united Germany. I know the Germans intimately. From childhood I have traveled extensively through-out most of the German States. I have many German family connections, and I venture to say that outside the usual body of Anglophobes one meets in every country there is little hostility to the British on the part of the Germans. "And, on the other hand, there is in England no dislike of Germany Au contraire, our statesmen are adapting German legislation to our needs, and if imitation be the sincerest form of flattery the Germans must be well pleased with our proposed reproduction of their workingmen's insurance, their labor bureau. and a great many other legislative improvements that, it appears to me, would be just as vital to the United States as they seem to be to Great

Why, then, if so happy a state of affairs exists between the two na-tions, should there be any section of people in England to suggest the possibility of war? Turn back to 1869. Was there any friction between France and Prussia? There was no hostility on either side. But any reader of Bussche's Bismarck or standard authority on the great German in the time of Queen Elizabeth.

Empire builder will acknowledge "The American press is a great

Chicago. - In an interview pub-, is being kept secret by Germany to-

"As to that which is transpiring in he German shipbuilding yards, we more or less know that by 1912 Germany, in ships of the super-Dreadbought class, will be the equal of England.

"If we were in your position, able to grow our own food on our own acres, it would matter little to us if we had merely an ornamental navy. But how few Americans realize that ur food is brought to us from Ausralla, Canada, much of it from the ity of Chicago, and your Western heat fields, from the Argentine Reabile-nearly all of it from over the

We have the official figures of the German naval program up to 1912, which are serious enough, but we know that these figures are just as accurate as were the figures made onblic by dermany prior to the Fran-o-Prussian war of 1871.

'America is a nation of optimists England a nation of pessimists. "America should produce great artits, great mesicians, great statesmen you have the material. "Theodore Roosevelt is one of the few men of this or any age great enough to say what he thinks. Europe has no one like him.

"John D. Rockefeller could make no better use of his vast wealth than the founding of your wonderful uni-versity. You should appreciate your rich men-men like J. Pierpont Morgan-for the wise use of their mill-

"You really are a marvelous people," he exclaimed, "marvelous for your conservatism. You talk about the income tax as though it was something new and daring. Why, we had our discussion of the income tax that was kept secret as far as possible, and which also, as far as possible, cate."

gone. Medicine will do me no good. I suffer! Oh, how I suffer! "'But pay no more for medicine. I have cost you too much money ala determined man you would not see me suffer as I do.'

a revolver with which I intended to defend our home; I shot her in the head; she died instantly.

"I determined then to kill myself.

told me I should surrender myself to mony, given with unaffected emotion,

Following him, Dr. Dupre, a dis-tinguished alienist, testified that Baudin is perfectly sane. But, said Dupre, he was incited to his fatal act by the stronger will of his wife. Pity for her, directed by her will, led him

As Baudin left the courtroom

free man the crowd applauded him.

When Baudin finished his testi-other being who depends on me.

the police, which I did at once.

all in the court were in tears.

FRENCH JURY JUSTIFIES KILLING SUFFERING WIFE

In Agony From Asthma, She Had Begged Her Husband to Trove His Love by Ending Her Life -- Judge, Jury and Spectators in Tears at the Recital.

Paris .- "A man whose wife is dying, medicine,' I said. of an agonizing disease is justified in killing her to put an end to her suffering if she implores him to do so."

So a jury, perhaps rather emo-tional, decided in the Court of Assizes here, and acquitted Edmond bandari, who, at her prayer, shot and killed ready.

"If you love me, put me out of "If you love his wife on January 31 last.

Mme. Baudin had been afflicted with asthma for years. It gripped her throat, it was a weight on her lungs, it stopped her breath. begged her husband to aid her by killing her quickly to rid her of the affection that was slowly throttling Baudin, a mechanic, thirty-nine years old, a rough and plain spoken man, sought to justify his act with words as straightforward as they were made dramatic.

Tears streamed from his eyes while he testified. The jurors also wept, and the women in the courtroom were semi-hysterical.

The presiding judge, who disapproved of the jury's verdict, remarked: "For the moment the bandage on eyes of justice was a handkerchief. "My wife, whom I loved dearly, had suffered fearfully from asthma, Baudin testified. "She could not sleep. If she laid her head on the pillow she would cry: 'I am choking! In the name of the good God, end my misery! Let me die!'

In the name of the good God, end my misery! Let me die!"

"On the night she—she died she was suffering intensely," Baudin went on between sobs. "The medicine she was taking was nearly exhausted.

"'I will go and get you some more."

The question whether it is morally justifiable to end the suffering of those who are bound to die of a mortal disease has been discussed in this country. Of course it was decided that such an act, whether inspired by love or pity, is murder.

John Davidson's Body Taken Out

village of Mousehole.

Ten Miles From the Cornish Coast

London.—The recently recovered body of the poet John Davidson was buried at sea ten miles off the Cornish

The body was conveyed from shore

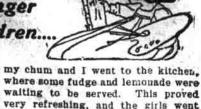

Submarines Reach

Depth of 200 Feet. Quincy, Mass.—With one excep-tion, the fiest of six submarine boats constructed by the Electric Boat Comconstructed by the Electric Boat Company for the Government have completed all tests and will be turned over to the naval officials in the Charlestown Navy Yard. As a class, the submarines broke all records for submergence, reaching a depth of 200 feet. The Snapper, at Provincetown, was in the course of her twenty-four-hour test, this being the only performance lacking in the fleet figures. The body was conveyed from shore in a ship's lifeboat.

John Davidson, a poet whose work though highly esteemed by a few cultivated persons failed of general appreciation and so of a paying market, disappeared from his home on March 23, and a document that he left indicated that he intended suicide.

For the Younger Children.

very refreshing, and the girls went back to the parlor, where they sang and played on the plano for a while before going to work again. A heavy shower was gathering and the room became so dark we had to light the lamp. Even though the girls had stated with one accord that they were willing to get wet for the sake of a rain, they never dreamed that it would come that afternoon. They began to wonder how they would get home, for the roads were real muddy and of course none wore overshoes. Just about the time they were most anxious a man came along with a large wagon and consented to take them all home. They secured a big blanket, which they placed in the bottom of the wagon, where they were all packed in like sardines.

They went away gayly singing after completing nearly two hundred

I took my own money to buy articles to complete the roses and make them prettier.-Florence E. Knox, in the New York Tribune.

DOROTHY'S DREAM. THE HEART OF LITTLE BOB.

It was late one summer afternoon, but the sun was shining golden after two days of clouds. For a day and night the rain had fallen in torrents, the creek near the Carter home was nearly over its banks, and the roads were very muddy.

Nevertheless little Bob Carter had to go on an errand for his mother, nearly two miles down the pike road to his aunt's. They always went the short-cut through the meadows, and that way it was less than a mile; but on account of the recent rains Bob must take the pike this time.

Now, about a mile from his home, and just off the pike a little ways lived an old woman all alone in a ting, cottage on the banks of the creek. She was always cross, Bob thought, for when he came near her she would shake her cane; and he would hurry past. When he and his sister Nell went to school, they would always run past her house very quickly, for they were afraid of her.

Now, little Bob didn't even know her name, for his father had moved to this farm only a short time before from another State.

Her house was the only one between his own home and his aunt's, and this afternoon when little Bob came in sight of it, he saw her a long way off waving her cane in the air. He started to turn and run back home, for he was very much frightened. Then he remembered mother wanted that cough syrup for Baby Ruth, so he said to himself, "Robert Carter, you're ten years old, and you ought to be ashamed to be a fraid-

So he marched bravely on, and as he got nearer he could hear the old lady screaming and saw her cane waving in the air. He was more scared than ever, but he went on. Then he saw that the waters of the creek had got up within a few inches of her door, and she was calling: "Bobby Carter, Bobby Carter, run and tell your uncle to come, or I shall be drowned."

Now the heart of little Bob was good, and he was a bright child, so he called back: "Don't be afraid; I'll run quick and tell him."

Then he ran as fast as his legs would take him, and soon his uncle Thomas and his big cousins, Sam and Jake, got their wagon and the boat out, and had the old lady and most of her furniture high and dry at their home on the hill. They took little Bob that far on their wagon, and he ran home the rest of the way with the medicine for the baby. That night the waters rose and flowed into the little old home of Mother Morris, and if she had been in it she would have been drowned. She said that Bobby Carter saved her life. Mother Morris was a very fine old lady, but a little queer because she liked to live alone, and always shook her cane at people when she wanted to talk with them and be friendly. She had a son, who was a rich farmer, and when he came to take her to his beautiful home, he gave little Bob a handsome pony all for his very own Everybody said that the heart of little Bob was good and kind, and that he was a brave boy .- Jeanette, in the Indiana Farmer.

Why Shirts Wear Out. It cannot be said that the use of machinery in laundries has been regarded by the general public as an unmixed blessing. We believe, however, that very much of the ill-feel-ing that exists should not be charged to the machinery, but to the careless use of it, and probably also very article which is to be sold for five largely to the use of the strong chemicals which made their appearance about the same time as laundry machinery.—Engineering.

The Vanishing Art.

Talking is becoming a lost art. A tacit conspiracy is narrowing the field of so-called polite conversation. difficulty we found some picture wire, which after being untwisted served the purpose very well.

The position in which we were sitting soon made our feet "go to sleep," so some of the girls proposed a game of tag. While this was in Iuli sway are tabooed.—Oxford Isia.

"I wish I knew," said Wonder-Heart,
"If leaves begin to whisper
From tree to tree, when suddenly
The summer winds blow crisper;
If these sigh low, 'We're growing old!'
If those say soft, 'We're gathering gold,
Our laps are full as they will hold,
And now and these a lister.

And now and then a lisper Calls gleefully from overhead, 'Our petticoats are turning red!' "I want to know," said Wonder-Heart,
"If the first snowflakes shiver
A little bit before they flit
Out of their sky forever.
If some look down and sob, "Too deep!" If some look down and soo, 100 deep!
While others laugh and take the leap,
Till all come flocking, white as sheep,
On mountain, field and river.
How do they feel when first they start?
I wish I knew," said Wonder-Heart.

—Youth's Companion.

MUST EAT ONE FIRST.

Little Doris could not count beyond four One day, when she was showing me five berries that she had picked, I asked, "How many have you, Doris?"

Her brows puckered a moment, then, dimpling with smiles, she answered, "Wait till I eat one-then I'll tell you! "-Woman's Home Com-

Once upon a time there was a little girl named Dorothy. One night as she was lying dreamily in her bed she was surprised to hear a soft squeak. Looking up quickly she saw a small brown Teddy bear. "I have come to take you to Teddy Bear Land," squeaked the little bear. After that she went to Teddy Bear Land regularly every week. But, alas, one week when Dorothy had been naughty and felt cross and uncomfortable, instead of the nice brown Teddy who usually came an ugly little dwarf came to see her. He invited her to go to dwarfland with him. She went, to her sorrow, for it was not nearly so nice as Teddy Bear Land; so she saw to it that the ugly dwarf did not come again .- Macon Miller, in the Brooklyn Eagle.

A WONDERFUL FRIENDSHIP.

One of the most remarkable friendships among animals is that which exists between a cat in the elephant house at the Zoological Gardens in London, and the large two-horned African rhinoceros which is kept there. It is even more strange than Aesop's fable of the mouse and the lion, for the little sleek mouse was able to be of great service to the lion in nibbling the meshes of his net; but the huge rhinoceros can scarcely believe that pussy is able to set him free; yet, that a great affection exists between the two is certain. They may be often seen together, puss toying with the formidable head of the monster, who appears to lay aside his strength, and is as gentle as a lamb, allowing her to do almost anything, even to lie sleeping contentedly close to his nose, or playfully patting his horn with her paws; yet with one mighty charge that same horn could easily destroy an elephant. True affection may exist between the most opposite natures, and the strong have it always in their power there was immense preparation on the part of Germany—a preparation power for the uplifting of the public. Folks' Catholic Weekly.

> FED BY THE BOTTLE. About three months ago I was much surprised on coming home from school to find that I was the possessor of four puppies. I was to be disappointed, however, for next morning I was informed that during the night the mother dog had died. "'No, she said, buy no more med-icine. You know we are poor. I am Who should take care of the orphans? They were only a day oldtoo young to take care of themselves. It was then that I thought of raising them by the bottle. I bought some bottles, filled them with warm milk and put them in a convenient position my misery. Prove your love and let me leave you. Kill me! If you were in the pupples' box. They began to sneeze and to sputter in a very queer and discouraging manner. But one adventurous little puppy soon discov-"I was maddened by the sight of her agony," Baudin ended. "I seized ered that the milk was worth taking, and his three brothers were soon of the same opinion. You can be sure that they did not have to starve, for a few yelps always but I thought of my sister, the only brought a half dozen people to them, and the pupples would be everwent to see my sister. She wept, but whelmed with milk. Three months later there were four frisky little pupples running about and chasing one another on the lawn. These were not everyday puppies, but pupples brought up by the bottle .-Milton Schreyer, in the New York Tribune.

MAKING PAPER ROSES. Some of the ladies in our church intend to hold a fair, and about ten Junior Endeavor girls will help to make it a success. We decided to make a rose garden of paper roses, and at the end of each rose attach an

I purchased some tissue paper and wire, asked the girls to bring their scissors and come to my home on Thursday afternoon, which they promptly did.

We sat on the floor, Indian fashion and worked real hard, but the wire soon disappeared, and after a little