Jesus Gives

By Rev. J. H. Ralston, Secretary Correspondence Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT-My peace I give unto you.-

Peace

Jesus never spoke an empty or unneeded word. He knew the restlessness of men in his day, and knew that such restlessness would characterize all days, and in accordance with the promptings of his own loving heart sought to dissipate it. In only one way done-he must displace it by something else. Never in all the history of the race were the appliances for physical wellbeing so numerous and well adapted making, notwithstanding the passing of the single dwelling as home, was never so perfect; sanitation is far and away superior to any period of the past; medical and surgical skill defy many diseases that were formerly fatal: institutions for the care and cure of defections of various kinds are found even in small places; provision is lavishly made for the education of the young in literature, science, and art as never before; and millions of money are being poured out, and great conferences are being held in advancement of universal peace-but the cry is yet heard,

"O, where can not be found,

Rest for the weary soul We may ask, Why is this, when the things just enumerated are undenied facts? We may have partial answer in the consideration of the things that member it is necessary to make the stand out as an offset to these things, facts as undeniable as they. If we consider the conditions which characterize all activities we are given pause. If we look at men in business life, whether in commerce, finance, manufacturing, or even agriculture, the elements of competition and chance keep the nerves stretched; if we consider the professions, law, medicine, or theology, the rivalry, however inexcusable, proves a nerveracking experience; and if we enter the spheres of politics, the game at first pleasant, at last comes to effort to overcome opponents sometimes by chicanery or even the use of corrupt practices. To such men the modern conveniences and appliances bring little relief. Even that which was possible ten years ago, the getting beyond the reach of the mails or the telegraph by an ocean voyage, is no men are crying for the lodge in the wilderness, the man of sixty seeks his chicken farm, in a few years to find disappointment. Is the Case Hopeless? pears with a solution of this problem. He says: "Peace, I give unto you," and all that man needs, of rest, quiet, contentment, and more, is offered. offered rests on another peace. This peace belongs to experience, the thing men and women are crying for. That peace refers to the right relationship with God, the lack of which is the true explanation of the unrest from which we would escape. That peace is a status or condition secured by trusting or resting on Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the only mediator between God and man. We have peace with God through faith, and are placed in a position where we can have the peace of God, that Jesus speaks of in the text. In no case can a man have the peace of God without the peace with God, emphasis being on the prepositions.

The world gives to the basest part of our being, to the part that relates us to the brute creation, and only in exceptional cases to the intellectual. If so how ephemeral is its offeringfor today with no promise of tomorrow! How quickly the body gives way, and soon after middle life the pleasure is no more. The world never gives, it demands its pound of flesh without failure or diminution. For one dollar's worth of pleasure given it demands one hundred cents of disgust and bitter dregs. The world never satisfies. It satiates, but, as Ruskin has said, "There are no pangs so sickening as the satisties of pleas

Jesus Parallels This Giving. He gives to the highest part of our being, the spirit. His invitation to men as followers is not to a Moham medan heaven, or a modern clubhouse, but to physical hardship and suffering-but it is to the spirit, which is to live forever and whose acquirements are lasting. He gives really, and the man or woman who by any chance seeks the peace because of conscious worth is doomed to disappointment. What he gives satisfies It is deep, quiet, strong. It took away the fears of the early martyrs. it enabled a McKinley to die calmly and gladly and to sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and today enables Chinese and other Christian martyrs to face death without fear.

This peace was tested by Jesus himself and sustained him all the way to the cross, and it is the peace of him who was God and who said to the waves on Galilee, "Peace, be still." What a guaranty, "My peace," tested and proven adequate, and that of the infinite God himself!

Go out and see whether the hills are there yet, before you conclude that the word of God has failed.

If the Lord gives us much to do or bear, he will also give us the grace seeded for its accomplishment.
