FOE OF EFFICIENCY IN NAVY

Commander-In-Chief of British Atlantio Fleet Declares Alcohol Is Detriment to Men.

The following clear and striking declaration by Sir J. R. Jellicoe, commander-in-chief of the British Atlantic fleet, shows how the most responsible officers of the navy regard alcohol as the great foe of efficiency among men of the service:

"Any officer holding a command which carries with it any measure of responsibility for the defence of the empire must recognize, as I do, the value of temperance in promoting fighting efficiency. In the navy there are three qualities upon which efficiency mainly depends. They are dis-cipline, straight shooting, and endurance, and temperance unquestionably tends greatly to the promotion of these qualities. In regard to discipline, one has only to look at the punishment returns to realize how many of the disciplinary offences are due at the outset to intemperance. As for endurance, medical research has amply proved the fact that temperance is a great asset in improving physical qualities and, therefore, the endurance of the human race. But of our own personal experience we know that we do not drink alcohol just before a football ALIFORNIA has some beautiful | pressive than this. California has match or a boat race. If we do we many beautiful customs upon which shall fail, and the same is true of any other pursuit involving endurance. As regards straight shooting, which is so largely a question of eye, it is every one's experience that abstinence is necessary for the highest efficiency If one were going to a rifle meeting in the afternoon, it wouldn't do to drink a whisky and soda at lunch. If

I should do that I know I should have no chance of making a "possible." What applies to a rifle applies equally to a heavy gun, and all admirals recognize this by taking care that the fleet is called away from a harbor on urgent business at least twenty-four hours before battle practice or a gunlayers' test is commenced.

"Most captains also, if their ships are to fire at these practices in the afternoon," continued Admiral Jellicoe. "hold over the grog issue until the evening. In this connection I should like to refer to the experience of Capt. Ogilvy, who, I regret to say, died some eighteen months ago. He was the officer who did such good service with naval guns at the relief of Ladysmith. Commencing under Sir Percy Scott in the Terrible, he later commanded the Grafton, a gunnery school tender, and then the Revenge, the instructional battle practice ship. and died when in command of the Natal, which ship he placed at the top of the fleet in gunlayers' test. He went carefully into statistics, and found that the shooting efficiency of men was 30 per cent. beter before than after the grog issue. He put his figures in the form of a curve, and it behooves an admiral when chasing an enemy's fleet and manoeuvering for position to consider the grog curve as well as the position of the sun and direction of the wind.
