

RHEUMATIC ADVICE
Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

"From your druggist get one ounce of Turp compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sassafras compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." This is said to be the quickest and best remedy known to the medical profession for rheumatism and backache. Good results come after the first dose. If your druggist does not have Turp compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Turp compound in the original one-ounce sealed, yellow package. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured here by this prescription last winter. Juvenile remarks are not always so naughty as they seem. Small Sam, for instance, had no intention of using bad language when he got into such severe trouble in class. His teacher was trying to press home certain facts concerning a volcano. In reviewing the lesson she drew on the blackboard her own conception of a flaming mountain, using colored crayon with extraordinary effect. "What is it?" she asked, the picture finished. The scholars shook puzzled heads. "You don't know? Well, what does it look like?" the teacher persisted. Piped Sammie, whose home boasts a colored pictorial Bible. A rural postmaster tells this story of one of the patrons of his office, a boy of thirty, not to say penurious, stock. When the lad comes into the postoffice he will thrust his wizened face up close to the window and, in his slow, Yankee drawl, inquire most earnestly: "Hev ye got any postal cards?" "Yes," the postmaster replies. "How much be they today?" "A sent apiece." Then the boy, screwing up his eyes in the intensity of his thought over the question he has to decide, always stops for a while to weigh the consequences. Finally, he will reply solemnly: "Wal, I'll take one."—Youth's Companion.

WITH THE WOUNDED

Victims of Balkan War Saved From Death by New Surgery.

Wonderful Work of Doctors and Nurses at Hospital in Belgrade—Men Shot Through Head or Heart Often Recover.

Belgrade, Servia.—The human side of war, as shown in the improvised military hospitals of Belgrade, presents many touching scenes. Every school in Servia has been turned into a hospital. Here, where there are a great many wounded from the battle of Koumanova, and from the skirmishes about Monastir, not only the schools, but every available building, including the local barracks and a sugar factory, has been transformed into wards with neat rows of white beds. Practically every country in Europe has sent a corps of surgeons and nurses to the war. The United States has done its share by contributing to the work of these devoted Red Cross toilers about $12,000—more than any other nation. The surgeons are all greatly interested in their cases, for modern warfare, with small, powerful, driven steel bullets, presents remarkable wounds.

At the time of the American Civil war arms and legs were lopped off by thousands to prevent blood poisoning. In these days of antiseptic surgery there is almost no amputation. One soldier was shot through the middle of the finger; his whole finger has been saved. A number were struck when firing from lying posture, the bullet passing through the head, straight down through the heart and out at the thigh. The lives of several so wounded have been saved. It used to be considered fatal to be struck in heart or head. In these hospitals there are men who have been shot right through heart or head and who will recover. Often it is not considered necessary to extract bullets which have lodged in the body. The wound is simply disinfected and allowed to heal.

Nothing is more significant of the fine quality of the Servian peasantry than the speed with which their wounds have cicatrized. The surgeons are amazed, and lay the phenomenon to pure blood, untainted by alcohol. Many brought here within the last two months have recovered, and gone back to the front.

One of the most interesting hospitals is in charge of the Russian corps, in the local exposition building. Nearly all the nurses here are women of good family, a number of whom got experience in the Russo-Japanese war. Enter this ward. That blond young woman ironing sheets near the door in the corridor is the daughter of the Russian ambassador. These are wounded Servian officers in here. It is the visiting home. In Servia, it is the custom to congratulate a soldier who receives a wound. In comes a dumpy old peasant woman, her wrinkled face beaming, and drawing forth an orange from her clothes she toddles straight toward one of the beds, where follows a tender greeting between her and her soldier son. Speak to this handsome young fellow.

"Yes, sir, I was one of the 60,000 Servians who went to help the Bulgarians around Adrianople after our own work was done. I was wounded in a skirmish in the trenches. But you should talk to that officer over there. He is a major and a hero."
"I got my wound at Koumanova—or, rather, my five wounds." His face lighted up with pride as he spoke. "We had driven the Turks back that day and at night they tried to retaliate. We charged them through the dark and I was caught in their volley. The Servian officer, sir, is always at the head of his men."

In the next ward are some private soldiers nearly well. One is playing a rustic flute and other are dancing "holo," the national country dance, with some of the pretty Russian nurses.

Here are more serious cases. That old man—what is he doing here?

"Yes, sir, I am a 'last defense' man. I was engaged with others in the rear guard, burying some dead, when a band of Moslem villagers suddenly fell upon us. I was shot before I could drop my spade. We drove them off, though, and they ran up into the hills."

Upstairs is a large ward of Turkish wounded. Do not imagine because Russian sympathies are with the Servians that these stricken enemies get any the worse treatment. On the contrary, it is almost as if the doctors and nurses took a pride in being kind to these vanquished ones.

Missouri Boy Makes Life Miserable for Fast Autoists—Rifle Sounds Like a Puncheon.

Kansas City, Mo.—Farmer boys in the vicinity of Oak Grove have a new trick which they are playing on county autoists who burn up the county road in that section. Henry Sieben, with Mrs. Sieben and William Wolf, former alderman, and Mrs. Wolf, while motor along the rock road in the eastern end of the county recently had a trick played on them.

"I guess we were hitting it up at about a 50-mile clip," said Henry, "when I distinctly heard a puncheon. I whistled for brakes and stopped the machine so suddenly I nearly lost my guests."

"Did you hear anything?" I asked Billy Wolf.

"You've got a tire puncture somewhere here," he informed me, thereby confirming my worst suspicions. "It's a puncheon sure," said the women, and then I knew I was on the right track."

Rich Mrs. Cameron Sues Husband Because He Didn't Get Home Early.

New York.—Whether Mrs. Marguerite Stone Cameron, who lives at the Hotel Savoy, will limit her request for alimony to $1,000 a week remains to be seen when motions in her suit for separation from her husband, Alpin W. Cameron, are heard in Justice Page's part of the supreme court.

"Mrs. Cameron will not ask for as much as $2,000 a week," said Mrs. Francis W. Stone of Cleveland, the young woman's mother. "Whether she will limit it to $1,000 I cannot say."

Mrs. Cameron is as wealthy in her own right as is her husband, who is the son of the millionaire head of the Alpin J. Cameron company, yarn manufacturers, of Philadelphia and Chicago. But the intimation reported to be conveyed in the papers filed by her lawyer, former United States Attorney Gen. John W. Griggs, is that Mrs. Cameron seeks to discipline her husband by drawing heavily upon his pocket book.

No hint of serious disagreement between the Camerons so far attaches to the wife's suit. Mrs. Cameron will allege, so her lawyers admitted, that the cause of estrangement has to do merely with Mr. Cameron's seeming inability to reach home early in the evening.

The Camerons made their home at Ridgewood, N. J., for several years following their marriage at Atlantic on October 7, 1902. Ridgewood, a pretty settlement of the ultra-exclusive type, is accessible only by a railroad. Mr. Cameron was oftentimes kept late by business at the New York office of his father's concern, 260 Broadway, where he acts as manager.

POSES AS GIRL FOR YEARS

Mother Had Too Many Sons, So Disguised His Sex, Even Father Being Deceived.

Victor, Colo.—After masquerading as a girl for 18 years the sex of Irene Moynahan was learned. He was arrested in La Junta by Sheriff A. H. Weinecke, who, because of his masculine appearance, decided he was a boy in girl's clothes. Irene was on his way to visit his father in Bisbee, Ariz.

Until the holidays Irene had been a student in the Victor high school and all his life had been passed off as a girl.

Mrs. Moynahan, when told that her boy had been arrested and that his sex had been discovered, stated that she had always passed him off as a girl because of her disappointment in having two sons.

Not even her husband was aware of the boy's sex. This was borne out by the discovery of a letter in the boy's effects by the sheriff at La Junta. The letter was addressed to his father in Bisbee and declared that the mother was "sending a son to him as a New Year's gift."

Mrs. Moynahan will join her son at La Junta, and together they will continue the journey to Bisbee. Irene is now dressed in boy's clothes, furnished by the police, for the first time in his life.

Mr. Moynahan is a lessee of the independence mine in the Cripple Creek district.

The Highest Education

By REV. WILLIAM EVANS, D. D.,
Director of Bible Classes,
Meady Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—"Cease to do evil; learn to do well."—Isa. 1:16-17.

Life's greatest work is the building of character. Our world is a college, events are teachers, happiness is the graduating point, and character is the diploma which is given to man. Character is more than learning and intellect; goodness outshines genius. Character is not so much a thing of intellect as of disposition, therefore should be clothed with goodness.

The only abiding thing, the only thing that you may take with you into the future life, is character. It is a mark of wisdom to look into and prepare for the future. Herein lies the difference between a child and a man, the savage and the civilized, the rich and the poor—the ability to look into and plan for the future. The power of the artist lies in his ability to see and see finished pictures. Character is the best thing you can leave behind you. A good character is the best tombstone. We are remembered by what we have done. The absence of character is hopeless, weakness and wickedness.

Intellectual culture is not necessarily character. It is often argued that intellect and moral development go together. History, however, disproves such a statement. If that were true the peasant, if pious, even though he had no education, would be a Shakespeare or a Milton; then goodness must accompany scholarship and so every scholar would be a moral man, which is not the case. Intellectual culture may be and often is accompanied by character, but it is not identical with it. Did intellect save Solomon from vice, Dacon from bribery, or Byron from immorality? Coleridge says: "All the mere products of the understanding tend to death."

Wealth is not character, although it is often substituted for it. People without character, but with money, often are admitted into respectable society. Wealth in the hands of weak men is a fearful thing. It is not true that moneymaking has the tendency to banish great thoughts and fine feelings? Why is so much immorality connected with wealth?

Reputation is not character. Character is what a man is, reputation is what men think him to be; and often these two things are reversed by the revelation of the newspapers. Character is what a man is before God; reputation is what he is before men; reputation is for time, character is for eternity. Character is what a man's character can no more be strengthened by reputation than a fence by whitewash.

What, then, is character? The word signifies something scored or engraved, and carries with it an abiding significance; so we may speak of character as that which sets forth certain abiding results which have been scored or engraved in the soul of man by the experiences of our souls of the free choices of good or evil we have been making continually through life. It is that which engraves itself upon all we do. Character is what we are in the hidden recesses and not merely on the surface of our lives; it is not really what men take us to be, but what we are before God as our judge. Character is a true man, a true woman, at their best and highest, living out the dictates of their highest, best and truest natures.

The man of character is truthful. "His armor is his honest thought, and simple truth his utmost skill." He does not profess a thing that he does not intend to do; he does not promise a thing which he knows is not in his power to fulfill. No considerations can justify the sacrifice of truth which ought to be sovereign in all the relations of life. A lie is never justifiable. Some one has said that other vices are virtues compared to lying, yet how lightly esteemed is falsehood. Lying oftentimes assumes the form of diplomacy, expediency, moral reservation, dodging the question, twisting words, and giving wrong impressions.

Character is characterized by modesty and purity. The bloom on a peach is of the very first consideration to its life and perpetuation; and the finest thing about a man or a woman is the fine bloom on the mind and the conscience. This feeling is more effectual for our protection than walls of granite or gates of brass. Take care of the delicacy of your mind, retain the power to blush, respect the alarm and shrieking of the soul at the faintest suspicion of evil. Let cynical people call you green; thank God for that color, and see that you keep it, for it is infinitely better than the sore and yellow leaf of a wasted life. Live so modestly, so purely, so resolutely for your God that your whole moral nature shall continue.

"Quick as the apple of an eye,
The slightest touch of sin to feel."

God Within Us.
"Ye are the temple of the living God, as God hath said, I will dwell in them."—II Cor., vi, 16.

God within us! Not only ever with us unseen, not only watching us in our secret moments and reading the very thoughts of our hearts, not only covering us with the shadow of his wings and lighting us with the light of his countenance, but within us—our bodies his temples, our hearts his home. Oh, if we could but grasp the thought we should live lives nobler and more beautiful.—Frederick W. Farrar.
