Government Is Finding Places for Disabled Men Who Have Been in School.

ALL VOCATIONS REPRESENTED

More Than 100,000 Are in Training Now, and Ultimately 318,000 Will Have Been Rehabilitated-Find Job to Fit Man.

Washington, D. C .- A new kind of employment agency is being opened by the government. Most offices of the sort start out in business with a list of alluring positions and invite jobless men to apply for them. The government is beginning at the other end. It has a group of well trained men on its hands and its employment agency will try to fit thein into the jobs which are doubt available about the country, but which are just now singularly

The new agency is in the veterans bureau, and its efforts are to be put forth in behalf of the disabled war veterans who are being rehabilitated under the direction of the bureau.

Although it is more than three years since the war ended, the peak of rehabilitation has not been reached. largely because so many of the veterans have been taking three and fouryear courses.

To date 16,485 men have completed their training and are employed. More than 100,000 are in training now, and ultimately 318,000 will have been rehabilitated. Many of the disabled men have not begun training. They are not yet physically able, their cases are pending, or for some other reason training has been deferred.

The new agency, which calls itself by the mouth-filling title of the Trainee-Employment Section of the Rehabilitation division of the Veterans' bureau, has just begun its task. It has men of practically every vocation on its hands, from dentists and farmers to stenographers and shoemakers.

The employment section has begun to establish contracts with organizations that are in touch with all angles of the job market.

Where Men Are Needed.

Employment experts of the Veterans' bureau are making a study of the professions and trades to determine which are crowded. A partial survey indicates that training has been provided in the past in some vocations which are badly overcrowded, while other lines in which trained personnel is needed have been overlooked. In future the bureau will consider supply and demand in starting its dlisabled men on new work.

A number of doctors are on the list of rehabilitated men, and these, at least, should have no difficulty in establishing connections, since small towns all over the country have been calling for doctors, is also encouraging to learn that 15,000 veterans are studying some phase of agriculture. Some of them have already found positions which they will enter on graduation. A number are going to teach agricultural sub-Jects in high schools and colleges. One man is going to South America as salesman of agricultural implements. The students of farming are being urged to buy land and start in business for themselves, and many are planning to do so.

The men who have been studying trades are placed in union shops for practical experience. When they are able to do a full day's work they are considered rehabilitated and given po-

A man learning a trade or business is rehabilitated when he has a position, and the government's responsibility toward him ends. It is more difficult to say when an artist is rewhen he paints his first promising pic- fancy, and David also died at the age bare.

All of the men whom the government has undertaken to have trained were unable to return to their old positions on a competitive basis with other

the public the fact that it need not hesitate to employ the rehabilitated men. The government is not sending out any one-legged park gardeners. A man who was so badly injured about the face that he is at a disadvantage in meeting people is not trained to be a traveling salesman. On the other hand, the loss of a leg does not affect the work of a draftsman and a disfigured face is not a handicap to a stock breeder.

The employment section is distinctly proud of the fact that so many of the bureau's trainees have a greater earning capacity now than they had in their pre-war occupations. A typical case is that of a man who had been a landscape gardener on a large estate. He lost one arm, and is now an auditor in the government service at $1,200 more a year than he was earning before the war.

The Veterans' bureau says that it is starting its employment services with men of fine caliber. A report has just come from the University of Florida stating that the average scholarship disclosures of the hardships, long in its law department is 85.5 per cent for trainees of the Veterans' bureau. while other students averaged 79 per cent.—Frederick J. DISPUTE OVER WILL IS CAUSE Brother and Sister Disagree Over What Constitutes a "Suitable Monument"-Courts Finally Called Upon to Settle Matter.

Durham, N. H .- Spite fences are not unusual, and there is the tradition of cutting off the nose to spite the face, but what is probably the only spite monument in existence stands in the little burial lot of the Joy family at Packer's Falls in this town. The outcome of years of family disagreements and controversies, a rough stone, bearing a quotation from the will of Sarah E. (Joy) Griffiths and erected as a reproach to her memory by her brother, Samuel Joy, still stands today in the little burial lot Considering the need for farmers, which has been owned by the Joy famexistence is almost forgotten.

A hand chiseled on the rough stone, which is of native New Hampshire granite and about 4 by 5 in dimensions, points to the handsome marble monu ment towering 15 feet above the ground and bearing the name of David Deciding it was time to let the world F. and Sarah E. Griffiths. Beside the hand is the inscription in large capitals: "A Suitable Monument and Fit Up the Lot." It was the manner in which this provision in the will of his sister, Sarah, was carried out that angered Samuel and caused him to take such a novel means of perpetuating the memory of a fancled in-

The story begins with the marriage of Sarah E. Joy to David F. Griffiths on February 11, 1846.

There were two children from the ture or when he makes his first sale? of thirty-six years and was buried in

ham. It is not clear whether there was any ill-feeling between Sarah and her husband, but after his death she moved to Manchester, and in her will she requested that she be buried in the Joy family lot and not with her

Sarah survived her husband by 32 years, dying in 1887. She left an estate of about $4,000-and a will. Her immediate heirs were Nancy S. Fesler, her sister, and Samuel, her brother. Apparently Nancy was not avaricious, but the $4,000 would have been of more gratification to Samuel had it not been for the will.

The stumbling block in the will was the provision that a suitable monument be erected to the memory of Sarah and the burial lot fitted up. Nancy and Samuel, the administrators, differed as to how this provision should be construed; Nancy insisting that an imposing monument be erected, while Samuel held that a "suitable monument" meant merely a simple headstone such as had been erected at the graves of other members of the Joy family buried in the lot.

Nancy, however, was firm for the "suitable monument," and insisted that her sister deserved a more imposing commemoration than a mere head-

Taken Into Court. Up to this point the nephews of David F. Griffiths, Edward and Arioch, had taken no part in the quarrel, feeling that the affairs of their uncle's wife did not concern them. But at this overt act, Arigch decided that it was time for him to take a hand in the proceedings, and one dark night he removed the fence with its sarcustic habilitated. Samuel was not to be thwarted in his purpose, however, and his next move was to put up a small stone bearing the words, "I Am a Socialist."

What became of the stone remains a mystery. However, the son of Nancy Fesler had taken sides with his mother and with the Griffiths brothers and its disappearance is credited to him. Three or four years had now passed since Sarah's death and the terms of her will had not yet been carried out. It was a hopeless deadlock, and after many fruitless conferences between Nancy and Samuel, the case was finally taken to court. George W. Sanborn of Kingston was appointed to execute the will, which he did without delay. His action must have given gratification to Nancy, for he caused to be erected a huge monument costing $3, 500, and spent the remainder of the money on a fence to surround the lot. Samuel, defeated on all sides, was still determined on revenge, Deprived of any participation in the estate of his sister and seeing his opponents victorious in the end, he hired a stone cutter to carve the hand and the words from the will on the block of granite and set it up in the burial lot about 20 feet from the marble shaft over which there had been such bitter feel-
