Thorne! Thorne! it's all right. ht's all right!" cried Gale, in plercing tones. "Mercedes is safe! Yaqui enved her! Rojas is done for! Yaqui jumped down the wall and drove the bandit off the ledge. Cut him loose from the wall, foot by foot, hand by hand! We've won the fight, Thorne.'

For Thorne these were marvelous strength-giving words. The dark horror left his eyes, and they began to dilate, to shine. He stood up, dizzlly but unsided, and he gazed across the crater. Yaqul had reached the side of Mercedes, was bending over her. She stirred. Yaqui lifted her to her feet, She appeared weak, unable to stand alone. But she faced across the crater and waved her hand. She was unharmed. The Yaqui waved, too, and Gale saw in the action an urgent signal.

Hastily taking up canteen and rifles, Gale put a supporting arm around Thorne.

"Come, old man. Can you walk? Sure you can walk! Lean on me, and we'll soon get out of this. Don't look across. Look where you step. We've not much time before dark. Oh, Thorne, I'm afraid Jim has cashed in! And the last I saw of Laddy he was hadly hurt."

Gale was keyed up to a high pitch of excitement and alertness. He seemed to be able to do many things. But once off the ragged notched lava into the trail he had not such difficulty with Thorne, and could keep his keen gaze shifting everywhere for sight of enemies.

"Listen, Thorne! What's that?" asked Gale, halting as they came to a place where the trail led down through rough breaks in the lava. The slience was broken by a strange sound, almost unbelievable considering the time and place. A voice was droning: "Turn the lady, turn! Turn the lady, turn! Alamon left. All swing; turn

"Hello, Jim," called Gale, dragging Thorne round the corner of lava. "Where are you? Oh, you son of a gun! I thought you were dead. Oh, I'm glad to see you! Jim, are you

Jim Lash stood in the trail leaning over the butt of his rifle, which evidently he was utilizing as a crutch. He was pale but smiling. His hands were bloody. A scarf had been bound lightly round his left leg just above the knee. The leg hung limp, and the foot dragged.

"I reckon I ain't injured much," replied Jim: "But my leg burts like b-I, if you want to know."

"Laddy! Oh, where's Laddy?" "He's just across the crack there. I was trying to get to him. We had head Rojas off the trail. . .

it hot an' heavy down here. Laddy was pretty bad shot up before he tried Dick, did you see the Yaqui go after "Did 1?" exclaimed Gale, grimly.

"The finish was all that saved m from runnin' loco. I reckon our chances are against findin' Laddy alive. . . . I tell you, boys, Rojas -l-bent. An' Mercedes was I saw her shoot him. But ebbe bullets couldn't stop him then. If I didn't sweat blood when Mercedes was fightin' him on the cliff! Then the finish! Only a Yaqui could have done that. . . . Thorne, how about you? Dick, is he bad hurt?"

"No, he's yot." A hard knock on the skull and a scalp wound." replied Dick. "Here, Jim let me help you over this place"

Step by step Gale got the two injured men down the uneven declivity and then across the narrow lava bridge over the fissure. Here he bade them rest while he went along the trail on that side to search for Laddy. Gale ind the ranger stretched out, face downward, a reddened hand clutching a gun. Gale thought he was dead. Upon examination, however, it was found that Ladd still lived, though be had many wounds. Gale lifted him and carried him back to the others.

"He's alive, but that's all," said lek, as he laid the ranger down, "Do hat you can. Stop the blood, Ladigh as cactus, you know. I'll Gale, like a fleet, sure-footed mountain sheep, ran along the trail. He came upon Mercedes and the Yaqui. She ran right lute Dick's arms, and n her strength, if not her courage, e, and she grew lax.

"Mercedes, you're safe! Thorne's

Ladd tuen directed his appeal to The greeting between Mercedes and Thorne was calm-strangely so, it seemed to Gale. But he was now calm himself. Ladd smiled at him, and evidently would have spoken had he the power. Yaqui then joined the group, and his piercing eyes roved from one to the other, lingering longest over Ladd.

"Dick, I'm figger'n' hard," said Jim, faintly. "In a minute it'll be up to you an' Mercedes. I've about shot my bolt. . . . Reckon you'll do-best by bringin' up blankets-water-saltfirewood. stretching out all but the crippled leg. Gale examined it, assured himself the bones had not been broken, and then rose ready to go down the trail. "Mercedes, hold Thorne's head up, in your lap-so. Now I'll go."

On the moment Yaqui appeared to have completed the binding of his wounded shoulder, and he started to follow Gale. The descent to the arroyo was swift and easy. Gale hastily put together the things he needed; and, packing them all in a tarpaulin, he turned to retrace his steps up the Darkness was setting in. The trail was narrow, exceedingly steep, and in raving. Suddome places fronted on precipices. Gale's burden was not very heavy, but its bulk made it unwieldy, and it was always overbalancing him or knocking against the wall side of the trail. At last they reached a level, and were soon on the spot with Mercedes and the injured men.

Gale then set to work. Yaqui's part was to keep the fire blazing and the water hot. Mercedes' to help Gale.in what way she could. Gale found Ladd had many wounds, yet not one of them was directly in a vital place. Evidently, the ranger had almost bled to He remained unconscious death.

through Gale's operations. Jim Lash came out of his stupor. A mushrooming bullet had torn a great hole in his leg. Gale, upon examination, could not be sure the bones had been missed, but there was no bad break. The application of hot sait water made Jim groan. When he had een bandaged and laid beside Ladd. Gale went on to the cavalryman. A furrow had been plowed through his scalp down to the tone. When it had been dressed, Mercedes collapsed. Gale laid her with the three in a row and covered them with blankets and the tarpaulin.

Then Yaqui submitted to examina-tion. A bullet had gone through the Indian's shoulder. To Gale it appeared serious. Yaqui said it was a fice bite. But he allowed Gale to bandage it, and obeyed when he was told to lie quiet in his blanket beside the fire.

quiet in his blanket beside the fire.

Gale stood guard. The hour had come for him to face his great problem. It was natural that he hung back a little at first; natural that when he went forward to look at the quiet sleepers he did so with a grim and stern force urging him. Yaqui sitered, roused, yawned, got up; and, though he did not smile at Gale, a light shoue swiftly across his dark face, lits shoulder drooped and appeared atiff, otherwise he was himself. Mercedes lay in deep slumber. Thorne had a high fever, and was beginning to show signs of restlessmens. Ladd seemed just harely alive. Jim Lash slept as if he was not touch the

She bent over Thorne and laid her hands on his hot face. Then she rose -a woman such as he had imagined she might be in an hour of trial. Gale took up Ladd as carefully and gently as possible. "Mercedes, bring what you can carry and follow me," he said. Then, motioning for Yaqui to remain there, he turned down the slope with Ladd in his arms.

Neither pausing nor making a misstep nor conscious of great effort, Gale carried the wounded man down into the arroyo. Mercedes kept at his heels, light, supple, lithe as a panther. He left her with Ladd and went back. When he had started off with Thorne in his arms he felt the tax on his strength. Surely and swiftly, however, he bore the cavalryman down the trail to lay him beside Ladd. Again he started back, and when he began to mount the steep lava steps he was hot, wet, breathing hard. As he reached the scene of that night's camp a voice greeted him. Jim Lash was sitting up.

"Hello, Dick. I woke some late Where's Laddy? this mornin', Where's Thorne an' Mercedes? Look here, man! I reckon you ain't packin' this crippled outfit down that awful trail?"

"Had to, Jim-an hour's sun-would kill-both Laddy and Thorne. Come on, now."

For once Jim Lash's cool good nature and careless indifference gave precedence to amaze and scorn.

"Always knew you was a husky chap. But, Dick, you're no hoss! Get me a crutch an' give me a lift on one

"Come on," replied Gale. "I've no time to monkey."

He lifted the ranger, called to Yaqui to follow with some of the camp outfit, and once more essayed the steep descent, Jim Lash was the heaviest man of the three, and Gale's strength was put to enormous strain to carry him on that broken trail. Nevertheless, he went down, down, walking swiftly and surely over the bad places; and at last he staggered into the arroyo with bursting heart and red-blinded eyes. When he had recovered he made a final trip up the slope for the camp effects which Yaqui had been unable to carry.

In the labor of watching and nursing it seemed to Gale that two days and two nights slipped by like a few hours. Then Gale succumbed to weariness. After his much-needed rest he relieved Mercedes of the care and watch over Thorne which, up to that time, she had absolutely refused to relinquish. The cavalryman required constant attention. His condition slowly grew worse, and there came a day which Gale thought surely was the end. But that day passed, and the night, and the next day, and Thorne lived on, ghastly, stricken, about time you all was hittin' the trail was in a frenzy to get well. His apraying. Suddenly, and to Gale's back to Forlorn River, before the patient of the satisfied. amaze and thanksgiving, there came an abatement of Thorne's fever. With it some heat and redness of the in-flamed wound disappeared. Next morning he was conscious, and Gale grasped some of the hope that Mer-cedes had never abandoned. He forced her to rest while he attended to Thorne. That day he saw that the crisis was post. Recovery for Thorne was now possible, and would perhaps depend entirely upon the care he re-ceived.

he stripped the bandages from Ladd and applied the mixture to his wounds. That done, he let him lie with the wounds exposed to the air, at night covering him. Next day he again exposed the wounds to the warm, dry air. Slowly they closed, and Ladd ceased to bleed externally.

Days passed and grew into what Gale imagined must have been weeks. Yaqui recovered fully. Jim Lash be gan to move about on a crutch; he shared the Indian's watch over Ladd. Thorne lay a haggard, emaciated ghost of his former rugged self, but with life in the eyes that turned always toward Mercedes. Ladd lingered and lingered. The life seemingly would not leave his bullet-plerced body. The tireless, implacable, inscrutable savage was ever at the ranger's side. His great somber eyes burned. At length he went to Gale, and with that strange light flitting across the hard bronzed face, he said Ladd would live.

The second day after Ladd had been given such thin nourishment as he could swallow he recovered the use of his tongue.

"Shore-this's h-l," he whispered. That was a characteristic speech for the ranger, Gale thought; and indeed it made all who had heard it smile while their eyes were wet.

From that time forward Ladd gained, but he gained so immeasurably slowly that only the eyes of hope could have seen any improvement. Jim Lash threw away his crutch, and Thorne was well, if still somewhat weak, before Ladd could lift his arm or turn his head. His whispers grew stronger. And the day arrived when Gale, who was perhaps the least optimistic, threw doubt to the winds and knew the ranger would get well.

"Boys, come round," said Ladd, in his low voice. "An' you, Mercedes. An' call the Yaqu'."

Ladd lay in the shade of the brush shelter that had been erected. There seemed little of him but long, lean lines, and if it had not been for his keen, thoughtful, kindly eyes, his face would have resembled a death mask of a man starved.

"Shore I want to know what day is it an' what month?" asked Ladd. Nobody could answer him. The question seemed a surprise to Gale, and evidently was so to the others. "Look at that cactus," went on

"I reckon according to that giant cactus it's somewheres along the end of March," said Jim Lash, soberly. "Shore it's April. Look where the sun is. An' can't you feel it's gettin'

"Supposin' it is April?" queried

Lash, slowly. "Well, what I'm drivin' at is it's about time you all was hittin' the trail waterholes dry out."

"Laddy, I reckon we'll start soon as you're able to be put on a hoss." "Shore that'll be too late."

A silence, ensued, in which the who heard Ladd gazed fixedly at him and then at one another. Lash uneasily shifted the position of his lame leg, and Gale saw him moisten his lips with his tongue.

"Charlie Ladd, I sin't reckonin' you mean we're to ride off an' leave you

"What else is there to do? The hot weather's close. Pretty soon most of the waterholes will be dry. You can't travel then. . . . I'm on my back here, an' God only knows when I could be packed out. Not for weeks, mebbe. I'll never be any good again. even if I was to get out alive. . . . You see, shore this sort of case comes round sometimes in the desert. It's mon enough. Twe heard of sevcommon enough. I've heard of several cases where men had to go an' leave a feller hebind. It's reasonable, if you're fightin' the desert you can't afford to be sentimental. . . Now, as I said. I'm all in. So what's the sense of you waitin' here, when it means the old desert story? By goin' now mebbe you'll get home. Shore now, boys, you'll see this the right way? Jim, old pard?"

"No, Laddy an' Lean't force here

'No, Laddy, an' I can't figger bow

you could ever ask me,"
"Shore then leave me here with Yaqui an' a couple of the hosses. We Ladd's eyes sought Gale's face.

"Soo, you ain't buil-beaded like Jim.

Ladd tuen directed his appeal to Mercedes. His face was now con-vulsed, and his voice, though it had sunk to a whisper, was clear, and beautiful with some rich quality that Gale had never before heard in it. "Mercedes, you're a woman. You're the woman we fought for. An' some of us are shore goin' to die for you. Don't make it all for nothin'. Let us feel we saved the woman. Shore you can make Thorne go. He'll have to go if you say. They'll all have to go. Think of the years of love an' happiness in store for you. A week or so an' it'll be too late. Mercedes, don't make it all for nothin'. Say you'll persuade Thorne, if not the others."

"Mercedes, You're a Woman. You're

For all the effect his appeal had to move her, Mercedes might have pos sessed a heart as hard and fixed at the surrounding lava.

White-faced, with great black eyes flashing, the Spanish girl spoke the word that bound her and her companions in the desert.

The subject was never mentioned again. Gale thought that he read s sinister purpose in Ladd's mind. To his astonishment, Lash came to him with the same fancy. After that they made certain there never was a gun within reach of Ladd's clutching.

Gradually a somber spell lifted from the ranger's mind. When he was entirely free of it he began to gather strength daily. Then it was as if he had never known patience—he who had shown so well how to wait. He petite could not be satisfied.

The sun climbed higher, whiter, hotter. Every day the water in the lava hole sank an inch.

The Yaqui alone spent the waiting times in activity. He made trips up on the lava slope, and each time he returned with guns or boots or sombreros, or something belonging to the pandits that had fallen.

Those waiting days grew into weeks. Ladd gained very slowly. Neverthe-less, at last he could walk about, and soon he averred that, strapped to a horse, he could last out the trip to Forlorn River.

There was rejoicing in camp, and plans were eagerly suggested. The Yaqui happened to be absent. When he returned the rangers told him they were now ready to undertake the journey back across lava and cactus. Yaqui shook his head. They de-pared again their intention.

"No?" replied the Indian, and his deep, sonorous voice rolled out upos the quiet of the arroye. He spoke briefly then. They had waited too tong. The smaller waterholes back in the trail were dry. The helt summer was upon them. There could be only death waiting down in the burning valley. Here was water and grass and wood and shade from the sun's rays, and sheep to be killed on the peaks.

"Wait for rain," concluded Yaqui, and now as never before he spoke as one with authority. "If no rain." Rilently be lifted a speaking hand, (TO BE CONTINUED.)
