W. SPERFERE

These loves alone will bring content: hese loves alone will bring content: The love of home, which works to know A little bed where roses blow; A cheery hearth, where kindness reigns And smiles light up the window panes; The love of home, which works to make A playground for the children's sake, And lovely, rooms where selfishness May sow no diacord or distress.

The second love to bring content Is love of friends and neighbors near: A love too warm, too true to sneer, A love that understands the cares And griefs and hurts each mortal bears, That seeks beneath the garmants thin Of fiesh and cloth the soul within, And holds to friendships, tried and true, Life's changing fame and fortune through.

The third great love to bring content Is love of God: that love which sees His sylendor in the sheltering trees, That finds Him nightly in the sky, Where race the stars and planets by; Where race the stars and planets by; That feels His presence when he stands Before life's storms with helpless hands, And trusts Him, whatsoe'er befall, To guide him safely throug it all.

The fourth true love to bring content In a rourin true love to bring content Is love of country: that sweet love Which cherishes the flag above, Which stands to serve and seeks to build A native land with laughter filled; Which gives obedience to its laws, Upholds its every righteous cause, And strives to live so all may see Just what a free man ought to be.
