OFFICE KAT KOLUM

Boys and girls, men and women, ladies and gentlemen, wise and otherwise, hear ye, hear ye! The Office Kat is about to start another weekly wail (or weakly wail). About what he will talk, I do not know, but I don't think that it will be important. If it happens to be important, it will be the first time, will it not? Well, here goes nothing, anyway.

— O. K. K. —

How many of you folks ever go over to Asheville Sunday nights to the midnight shows? Perhaps I should say Monday morning, for it is always after twelve o'clock when they start the shows. I run over there once in a while to a midnight show, and enjoy it very much; and I see several Marshall people there every time I go. Some people say that it's a darn fool thing to do—but they are people who probably have never been, and don't know how much fun can be had on such an occasion. Strike me dead if there wasn't a large crowd there last Sunday night. I thought I never would get inside the theatre. There was a long line of people standing outside patiently awaiting their turn, and I thought my turn was a long time in arriving. However, I finally got in and enjoyed the show tres beaucoup. I saw about eight or ten Marshall people there last Sunday night alone, and I just wondered how many Madison people attend these shows. I hope that those who do attend, enjoy the shows as much as yours truly does.

— O. K. K. —

Did you ever stop to think about what an ideal climate we have the privilege of enjoying here? Good gosh, just think of what nice, cool nights we have here in the mountains, while people in the lowlands are simply sweltering in the heat at night. And then there is another thing rather important when you come to think about it, and that is—mosquitoes, Oh, my gosh, I'm glad there are not so many of these pests in the mountains. The little devils worry me elsewhere. It might be a little better if they would just go on and bite a fellow, and not just keep him in suspense so long. But for their cute little songs—well, I never did like to hear a mosquito sing.

THE SHIP THAT WAS A NAVY

Giant Beams of White Oak Make "Old Ironsides" Anew

ARCHITECTS and builders throughout the country have long been familiar with the beauty and durability of oak floors. Architects know that the interior decorations and furniture are enhanced by floors of oak, with their rich, warm glow.

Builders, with an eye to the practical, recommend their installation not only because they add materially to the sale value of the home, but because they will last as long as the home itself.

Recently, the durability of American oak was graphically illustrated. By popular subscription money was raised to rebuild the famous frigate Constitution. The American public was not willing that "Old Ironsides," with her glamorous naval history, should become a memory.

When the Constitution was placed in dry dock at the Boston Navy Yard it was found that time, more than enemy shot and shell, had played havoc with her woodwork—with everything except oak. Up to the time of the launching of the "ship that was a navy" no nation had ever used live oak in shipbuilding. Today, as the work of rebuilding the famous frigate goes on, it was found that only about 12 per cent of the original ship existed—all the rest has been restored at various times. Only the live oak, forming the backbone of the vessel, she kept her together and made it possible to reconstruct her.

Paul Revere, who wrote to the Secretary of War that he could supply the cannon bolts and spikes which held the oak backbone in place.

And now oak again is to be used in making the Constitution anew. Just as the best materials obtainable were placed in "Old Ironsides" wooden timbers. The war that freed the slaves, who gathered this wood saw the passing of the wooden sailing ship. These great beams, stored away for nearly 70 years, have been shipped to Boston. To date 1,635 large pieces of oak, weighing nearly a ton apiece, have been received at the navy yard.

Admiral Philip Andrews, in charge of the work of reconstruction, is asking the public to subscribe $240,000 more to finish the work of rebuilding the famous ship. When she is completed it is planned to sail her to every large American port.

by her original builders, so the same materials will be used in restoring the hull. It happened that in Commodore's Pond, Pensacola, many tons of live oak had been submerged for use in building
