A Two-Dollar Dinner For Six

- Quaker Soup... 25¢
Sliced Cold-Cornd Beef... 25¢
Divided Eggs... 36¢
Cold Plate containing Potato Chips... 15¢
Cabbage and Carrot Salad... 23¢
Pimientos... 17¢
Rye Bread and Butter... 15¢
Custard with Raspberry Sauce... 34¢
Iced Tea... 6¢

ISN'T that a pretty good dinner for $2.00 or thereabouts? The above figures total $1.99, but food prices vary slightly in different localities.

To make the Quaker Soup, add one cup of water to a can of Pepper Pot Soup and heat to boiling. Heat a can of tomato soup to boiling, and add two cups of milk. Add hot tomato soup very slowly to the hot milk, not boiling after mixing. Add the hot Pepper Pot, season and serve.

For the Cold Plate you will need one 12-ounce can of corned beef, six eggs, one 3/4-ounce package potato chips, two and one-half cups cabbage, one 8-ounce can diced carrots, one-fourth cup French dressing, and one 7/8-ounce can of pimientos. Chill the can of corned beef in the ice box, remove from can, and slice thin. Have the cabbage finely shredded and very crisp. Add well drained carrots and mix in lightly the French dressing, using two forks. Arrange the ingredients attractively on individual service plates, and be sure to have them all very cold.

To make the Raspberry Sauce for the custard, mix one teaspoon cornstarch with one tablespoon sugar, add to the raspberries from an 8-ounce can and cook till slightly thickened. Cool. Serve cold over the cold and unmolded custards.

The only reason a great many American families don't own an elephant is that they have never been offered an elephant for a dollar down and easy weekly payments.—Nashville Banner.

Christmas Goodies That Will Keep

No matter how determined their effort it is never possible for the children to eat all the good things with which they find themselves surrounded at Christmas time. So it is an excellent plan to get at least half of your cakes and candies in tin containers which will keep them fresh for a long time. Handsome boxes, beautifully decorated, containing fruit cake, chocolates, glazed fruits, hard candies, nuts, all ready to eat or keep indefinitely, can now be obtained anywhere.

The Containers Count
The contents of these tin boxes aren't the only things that count, for very few of the containers themselves are ever thrown away. Long after the last piece of carefully doled out cake or candy has disappeared down an eager youngster's throat the big round fruit cake boxes, the rectangular cookie boxes, the tall containers for hard candies are all in use brightening the kitchen and pantry shelves, or serving as a sewing, a manicure, or a handkerchief box, or to keep cigarettes dry out on the porch.

These boxes are so finely made and decorated that they keep as fresh looking for years as their contents keep fresh until they're consumed. Many grocery stores and chain stores handle these tin containers of Christmas goodies, and one grocer said of the fruit cake boxes:

"The combination of fruit cakes and that bright red box comes as close to eating your cake and keeping it as anything I have ever seen. No one ever throws the boxes away."

MISS BESSIE MAIE KENT, et. al.
of $100 for information leading to her whereabouts. Even after friends and relatives of the girl had given up hope of her being found, the father continued to make inquiries and solicited the assistance of police and social aid workers in many sections of the county.

The girl's mother is said to have died several years ago. She was considered an unusually bright and popular student in school, and it had been believed that she was satisfied with her home environment. According to her father, she had had no dealings with any member of the family or the school faculty which made her disappearance the more difficult to understand.
