

News Review of Current Events the World Over

"Second Revolution" Smashed by Hitler and Its Leaders Put to Death—Roosevelt Names Five Boards and Sails Away.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

FOREWARNED of a radical plot within the National Socialist party to bring about a second revolution in Germany, Chancellor Adolf Hitler struck with swiftness and ruthlessness that completely smashed the revolt on the eve of the planned coup d'etat and left the malcontents, chiefly members of the Storm troopers, dazed and terrified. The Chancellor himself exhibited resolution and personal bravery with which the world had not credited him.

Chancellor Hitler

Flying from Berlin to Munich in the night, Hitler with only two bodyguards went direct to the summer home of Capt. Ernst Roehm, commander of the brown shirts and long his personal friend. Roehm and certain of his associates were found in situations that confirmed the often heard stories of their moral perversion, and as Hitler was certain also of their complicity in the revolutionary plot, he personally arrested Roehm, tore off his insignia and offered him a chance to commit suicide. This Roehm refused, so on Hitler's order he was shot to death, as were the others taken with him. Meanwhile, Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, directed a series of raids throughout the country that resulted in the deaths of numerous prominent members of the conspiracy and the arrest of scores. Chief among those shot down was Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, Hitler's predecessor as chancellor and reputed head of the revolutionary plot. His wife stepped in the way of the policemen's bullets and also died. Well-known Storm troop leaders in Munich and elsewhere were put to death summarily, and so was Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party.

Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, who had recently attacked the radical tendencies of the Nazis, was put under heavy guard, and forbidden to leave his home, and two of his adjutants killed themselves.

Von Papen offered to resign from the cabinet, but President Von Hindenburg, his close friend, refused to accept the resignation, and the cabinet urged him to remain as minister without portfolio to supervise activities in the Saar. Von Papen, however, will take a protracted leave of absence.

Viktor Lutze was appointed to succeed Roehm as chief of staff of all the reichswehr units, including the Storm troops among whom the disaffection had existed and the regular army, which was declared to be entirely loyal to Hitler.

President Von Hindenburg all this time was at his estate at Neudeck, East Prussia, and there were reports of his serious illness, which were flatly denied. Two days after the chancellor's drastic action the aged president telegraphed Hitler and Goering his approval of their course, congratulated them on their victory and thanked them in the name of the nation. Undoubtedly, Hitler's personal position was strengthened for the time being, and the leftist elements in the Nazi party were weakened and divided. Goering and Hitler professed pity for the "miserable" Storm troopers, but the latter are now out of their uniforms temporarily and may never be as important as they have been in the past. They had become something like a pretorian guard that threatened Hitler's supremacy.

In various European capitals there were predictions of further outbreaks in Germany and the return of the Hohenzollerns.

Hitler's "violent" methods were criticized by Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria's dictator, who said: "Does not the light at last dawn upon us that one cannot make a people happy with violent methods?"

Paris interpreted the affair as a victory for conservatives and as opening the possibility for a return of the Hohenzollerns. The violence, it was claimed, revealed a breakdown in the unity of the Hitler movement.

In London the view was taken that Hitler had solidified his position. Some papers accused him of employing the methods of gangsters and called the slaying of storm-troop leaders "brutal murders."

TRADE war between Great Britain and Germany was averted by the signing of an agreement protecting British interests during the next six months foreign obligations moratorium, ordered in effect July 1.

Under the accord, Germany agrees to pay Young and Dawes plan obligations when due in October, November and December, on presentation of coupons on bonds by the Bank of England.

For six months, beginning July 1, the German government is to provide sterling funds to the Bank of England for the purchase in full at the nominal value of all coupons on these loans held by British subjects on June 15, when the moratorium was disclosed.

JAPAN'S cabinet resigned as a result of a financial scandal involving a vice minister, and the emperor called on Prince Saionji, last of the elder statesmen, for advice in selecting a new premier. The prince recommended Admiral Keisuke Okada for the place and the emperor made the appointment, which was generally considered very wise. Okada asked Koki Hirota to remain as foreign minister, and the minister of war and navy also were reappointed. The new government is expected to follow the general lines of policy laid down by Saionji, retiring premier. One of its chief aims will be to clean up graft.

Japanese naval circles are convinced that Okada is the only man capable of safely piloting the nation through the naval conference next year. They feel that Saionji selected Okada because he realized that the conference will be of the utmost importance to Japan's future.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT departed on his cruise to the Caribbean and Hawaii aboard the Houston, accompanied by his two younger sons, Franklin, Jr., and John; Rudolph Forster of the White House secretarial staff; Commander Ross T. McIntire, naval physician; Gus Gennrich, personal bodyguard; Richard Jervis, secret service man, and Pharmacist's Mate George Fox. On accompanying destroyers are two secret service men and three representatives of three big press associations.

Before sailing the President performed these seven important acts:

Approved the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium bill.

Approved the railroad unemployment and pension act involving additional burdens of millions of dollars on the carriers.

Appointed Joseph Kennedy, wealthy New York stock operator as chairman of the new securities exchange commission for a five-year term, and George C. Mathews, James M. Landis, Robert E. Healy and Ferdinand Pecora as members for terms ranging from four years downward.

Named Eugene O. Sykes, Thad H. Brown, Paul Walker, Norman Case, Irvin Stuart, George Henry Payne and Hampson Gary members of the new communications commission for terms ranging from seven years downward.

Set up the new national labor relations board with Lloyd Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin law school, chairman, and Prof. Henry Alvin Mills, head of the economics department at the University of Chicago, and Edward S. Smith of Massachusetts, labor relations specialist, as the other members.

Named James A. Moffett, former vice president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and a member of the planning and co-ordinating committee of the oil conservation board, as administrator of the new $1,000,000,000 housing program.

Appointed five members of a commission to study federal aviation and air mail affairs and make recommendations to the next congress—Clark Howell, Atlanta, Ga., publisher; Jerome Clarke Hunsaker, New York; Edward P. Warner, Washington, D. C.; Franklin K. Lane, Jr., California, and Albert J. Berrea, California.

MR. ROOSEVELT went ashore for the first time on his cruise at Cape Haitien, Haiti, where he was met by President Steno Vincent and other officials of the island republic. At the Union club he made an address, partly in French, in which he announced the forthcoming withdrawal of the marines, adding that he hoped they would be remembered as friends who had tried to help Haiti. Marine detachments have been on duty in Haiti, whose population is 90 per cent colored, since 1915.

MME. MARIE CURIE, co-discoverer with her husband of radium and rated as one of the world's greatest women, passed away at Passy in the French Alps at the age of sixty-six years. Her physicians said that her inability to recover from an attack of pernicious anemia was probably due to the fact that her bone structure was weakened by years of exposure to radium and X-rays.

The Netherlands was thrown into mourning by the death of Prince Consort Henry. He was married to Queen Wilhelmina in 1901 and the Dutch people had learned to love him deeply.

ATTEMPTS to open the port of San Francisco, closed for some time by the dock workers' strike, resulted in bloody riots in which several men were killed and many injured. Gov. Frank Merriam called out 2,000 National Guardsmen.

WINDING up its fiscal year, the federal government found that, counting emergency expenses, it had spent about $4,000,000,000 more than it had collected. Balancing receipts against ordinary expenditures, the government figured it was $28,000,000 "in the black" for the year.

President Roosevelt has estimated nearly $5,000,000,000 would be added to the national debt by emergency expenses during the next 12 months. This was predicated on recovery that would make industrial production average 98 per cent of the 1923-25 level.

In July, 1935, the President hopes to start the payoff for the recovery program. By that time, he has said, the budget should be balanced.

According to the federal reserve board's index, the industrial production figure for the year just ended was slightly above the 81 per cent average on which the President based his hopes.

TWO events in recent days have emphasized the friendship that exists between the United States and Canada. The first was the dedication of the new International bridge spanning the St. Lawrence between Roosevelt, N. Y., and Cornwall, Canada. Secretary of War Derr represented President Roosevelt at the ceremony, and the earl of Beesborough, governor general, was there for the Dominion.

The second event, on July 4, was the return to the Canadian government of the mace of the parliament of upper Canada that was taken during the War of 1812, at the battle of York, and had been in the Naval academy at Annapolis ever since. On recommendation of President Roosevelt congress authorized the restitution of the mace. Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the bureau of navigation, accompanied by his aid, Lieut. Com. Ernest H. von Helmburg, made the presentation at Toronto and attended the unveiling of a monument erected by the United States' Daughters of 1812, to the memory of General Pike and others of the United States' forces killed during that war.

THERE was a general scattering of administration chiefs following the departure of President Roosevelt. Secretary Roper went to Alaska and Secretary Morgenthau to a Montana ranch. Secretary Derr sailed for the Canal Zone, and Secretary Swanson and Attorney General Cummings were down on the lower Potomac on yachts. Secretary Hall took motor rides in the Virginia mountains. Secretary Farley was in New York, and Secretary Wallace went to Chautauque. Secretaries Ickes and Perkins remained at their job. General Johnson went to Saratoga Springs for a rest. Harry Hopkins sailed for Europe and Professor Tugwell went to the Far West. Lesser lights also left Washington.

MEXICO elected a new constitutional president—Gen. Lazaro Cardenas—and it was the quietest election in the country's history.

PRIME MINISTER RAMSAY MACDONALD of Great Britain, who is in Scotland on a vacation, was bitterly assailed in the house of lords by Viscount Snowden, former chancellor of exchequer and once close personal friend of the premier. Snowden denounced MacDonal as a traitor to his colleagues in the Labor party and to the country.

"The cabinet found the prime minister such an amenable instrument of Tory policy," Snowden declared, "that it has come to the conclusion that there are no professions which he made, no pledges which he gave the country which he will not repudiate, no humiliation to which he will not submit if they only allow him still to be called prime minister."

"The Tories have no use for MacDonal except for exhibiting him on their platform in chains as the one-time Socialist who has seen the error of his ways and found salvation in the spiritual home of the Tory party."

"He will be used for the same purposes as the reformed drunkard at temperance meetings."

SENATOR BORAH of Idaho, independent Republican, opened his one-man campaign against the New Deal in a radio address attacking especially bureaucracy and monopoly. Although his criticism was directed primarily against what he conceives to be these elements in the New Deal, he summarily indicted the national leadership of the Republican party on the ground that it "seems wholly unwilling to touch this vital issue"—namely, the monopolistic trend.

The senator said the Roosevelt regime was establishing not Nazism, not Fascism, not Communism, but "simply that meddlesome, irritating, confusing, undermining, destructive thing called bureaucracy." And bureaucracy he defined as "that form of government which steals away man's rights in the name of the public interest and taxes him to death in the name of recovery." Bureaucracy, the Idaho senator asserted, "has destroyed every civilization upon which it has fastened its lecherous grip."

It is the common man who will be the chief victim of our new bureaucratic form of government, the Idahoan asserted. The influential and powerful have demonstrated that they "can generally obtain all the rights and privileges they desire under any form of government." But the "freedom and political rights" of the toilers are being more and more limited, whether under European dictatorships or the American bureaucracy.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

First Break in Germany
The Kaiser's Praise
What Next in Germany?
Vatican Resentment

The dictatorial path of Chancellor Hitler is not as smooth as with his colleagues, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha and Stalin.

A few killings, suicides and arrests will not put an end to such violent dissatisfaction, and the world wonders what will happen next.

Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

The former Kaiser expresses amazement at Hitler's energy and strength. He says Hitler is "stronger than ever."

It is clear the chancellor does not lack strength of will or swiftness of execution. Before he had seized complete power he predicted "heads will roll." They are rolling, and Hitler's head man, Goebbels, predicts that "more heads will roll."

That the Hitler collapse is to be followed by horrible violence is only too probable. What would come afterward?

Would extreme "red radicalism" come to the front to take control? Would there be that union of Russia and Germany that many Germans advocated immediately after the signing of the Versailles treaty?

The pope's government in the Vatican resents, bitterly, and naturally, the statement that Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party in Berlin, has committed suicide. An official of the Vatican recalls that "only recently Klausener made a noble speech to Berlin Catholics, which was read with deepest satisfaction by the Vatican." The Vatican official, quoted by International News Service, adds: "We must strongly protest against the attempt to camouflage murder as suicide, since the Catholic religion forbids suicide. Militants, like Klausener, would not dream of taking their own lives."

The same official said further: "It is deplorable that, not content with killing their adversary, the brown shirts threw mud at his noble figure."

Rudyard Kipling, not as young as he was, but persistently British and patriotic, writes a new poem which says Non Nobis Domine, meaning "Not Unto Us, O Lord," should the praise be given. This new "Recessional" poem was written for a magnificent pageant celebrating England's marvelous recovery from the big war and depression and dragging in the defeat of the armada. Kipling might have written, but did not write: "Non Nobis Domine—Give the praise to our goose-like friend Uncle Sam, for without him sending us billions of dollars, and quietly accepting our default, we should not be so well off."

This great nation, as mild as a sick white mouse concerning the gigantic defaulted debts of France and England, is roaring like a first-class lion at Germany's default. It must be a great comfort to find some one to whom you dare speak plainly.

Senator McAdoo, praising President Roosevelt, says, "Rugged individualism is dying." If that were true, it would be a sad thing for the country, because some necessary things white rabbits cannot do.

If rugged individualists had died earlier, there would be no tunnels from New York to New Jersey, under the North river. McAdoo cut them there, and it was a rugged job.

And if there were no rugged individualism left, there would be no President Roosevelt. Any man able to make congress eat out of his hand, and jump through new era hoops, is rugged.

Many old men will read this with sympathy: Fred Schlund inhaled gas and killed himself in a little furnished room. In his pocket were 6 cents and this note:

"Don't try to revive me. I want to be dead. I am over seventy-four."

President Roosevelt is said to have told his subordinates, high and low, old style and new "brain trust" style, not to talk politics while he is away on his trip to the Virgin Islands and Hawaii.

The President's order is wise. If all the different brains recently and suddenly injected into politics began arguing all together some of them might contradict each other.

Before leaving, the President establishes a "steel labor board," consisting of three men, well chosen. This board will deal with the steel strike as "the national longshoremen's board" will deal with the strike of dock laborers on the Pacific coast. Employers and employees are said to have requested the accepted arbitration by presidential boards, but Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, has not spoken enthusiastically or definitely on the subject.

Double Taxation Evil

I am told by real tax authorities, can be of much value. The house committee was instructed to look into the double taxation evil that besets the country. It is known to everyone, of course, that there are places and things upon which the federal government levies high taxes and that these taxes fall on top of similar, and sometimes greater, levies by the states. Consequently, the committee inquiry may bring to light how often, and where, this sort of thing is happening.

For example of double taxation, two or three common illustrations will serve to indicate how severely the burden obtains. Take the tax on gasoline as one. The federal government laid a tax on gasoline two years ago, and that tax although it was small had to be paid by users of "gas" in addition to the state levies which run as high in some states as 7 or 8 cents a gallon, making the tax borne by that commodity aggregate as much as 10 or 11 cents a gallon in some places. The tax on cigarettes is another example, but this commodity was taxed first by the federal government and then the states put their levies on. The result is that in many states the tax on cigarettes amounts to more than the selling price of the package would be if no tax were laid.

Twenty-nine states now collect taxes on incomes of individuals or corporations, and twenty-six of them collect a tax from both. These taxes, of course, are aside from the high rates

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

First Break in Germany
The Kaiser's Praise
What Next in Germany?
Vatican Resentment

The dictatorial path of Chancellor Hitler is not as smooth as with his colleagues, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha and Stalin.

A few killings, suicides and arrests will not put an end to such violent dissatisfaction, and the world wonders what will happen next.

Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

The former Kaiser expresses amazement at Hitler's energy and strength. He says Hitler is "stronger than ever."

It is clear the chancellor does not lack strength of will or swiftness of execution. Before he had seized complete power he predicted "heads will roll." They are rolling, and Hitler's head man, Goebbels, predicts that "more heads will roll."

That the Hitler collapse is to be followed by horrible violence is only too probable. What would come afterward?

Would extreme "red radicalism" come to the front to take control? Would there be that union of Russia and Germany that many Germans advocated immediately after the signing of the Versailles treaty?

The pope's government in the Vatican resents, bitterly, and naturally, the statement that Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party in Berlin, has committed suicide. An official of the Vatican recalls that "only recently Klausener made a noble speech to Berlin Catholics, which was read with deepest satisfaction by the Vatican." The Vatican official, quoted by International News Service, adds: "We must strongly protest against the attempt to camouflage murder as suicide, since the Catholic religion forbids suicide. Militants, like Klausener, would not dream of taking their own lives."

The same official said further: "It is deplorable that, not content with killing their adversary, the brown shirts threw mud at his noble figure."

Rudyard Kipling, not as young as he was, but persistently British and patriotic, writes a new poem which says Non Nobis Domine, meaning "Not Unto Us, O Lord," should the praise be given. This new "Recessional" poem was written for a magnificent pageant celebrating England's marvelous recovery from the big war and depression and dragging in the defeat of the armada. Kipling might have written, but did not write: "Non Nobis Domine—Give the praise to our goose-like friend Uncle Sam, for without him sending us billions of dollars, and quietly accepting our default, we should not be so well off."

This great nation, as mild as a sick white mouse concerning the gigantic defaulted debts of France and England, is roaring like a first-class lion at Germany's default. It must be a great comfort to find some one to whom you dare speak plainly.

Senator McAdoo, praising President Roosevelt, says, "Rugged individualism is dying." If that were true, it would be a sad thing for the country, because some necessary things white rabbits cannot do.

If rugged individualists had died earlier, there would be no tunnels from New York to New Jersey, under the North river. McAdoo cut them there, and it was a rugged job.

And if there were no rugged individualism left, there would be no President Roosevelt. Any man able to make congress eat out of his hand, and jump through new era hoops, is rugged.

Many old men will read this with sympathy: Fred Schlund inhaled gas and killed himself in a little furnished room. In his pocket were 6 cents and this note:

"Don't try to revive me. I want to be dead. I am over seventy-four."

President Roosevelt is said to have told his subordinates, high and low, old style and new "brain trust" style, not to talk politics while he is away on his trip to the Virgin Islands and Hawaii.

The President's order is wise. If all the different brains recently and suddenly injected into politics began arguing all together some of them might contradict each other.

Before leaving, the President establishes a "steel labor board," consisting of three men, well chosen. This board will deal with the steel strike as "the national longshoremen's board" will deal with the strike of dock laborers on the Pacific coast. Employers and employees are said to have requested the accepted arbitration by presidential boards, but Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, has not spoken enthusiastically or definitely on the subject.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

First Break in Germany The Kaiser's Praise What Next in Germany? Vatican Resentment

The dictatorial path of Chancellor Hitler is not as smooth as with his colleagues, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha and Stalin.

A few killings, suicides and arrests will not put an end to such violent dissatisfaction, and the world wonders what will happen next.

Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

The former Kaiser expresses amazement at Hitler's energy and strength. He says Hitler is "stronger than ever."

It is clear the chancellor does not lack strength of will or swiftness of execution. Before he had seized complete power he predicted "heads will roll." They are rolling, and Hitler's head man, Goebbels, predicts that "more heads will roll."

That the Hitler collapse is to be followed by horrible violence is only too probable. What would come afterward?

Would extreme "red radicalism" come to the front to take control? Would there be that union of Russia and Germany that many Germans advocated immediately after the signing of the Versailles treaty?

The pope's government in the Vatican resents, bitterly, and naturally, the statement that Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party in Berlin, has committed suicide. An official of the Vatican recalls that "only recently Klausener made a noble speech to Berlin Catholics, which was read with deepest satisfaction by the Vatican." The Vatican official, quoted by International News Service, adds: "We must strongly protest against the attempt to camouflage murder as suicide, since the Catholic religion forbids suicide. Militants, like Klausener, would not dream of taking their own lives."

The same official said further: "It is deplorable that, not content with killing their adversary, the brown shirts threw mud at his noble figure."

Rudyard Kipling, not as young as he was, but persistently British and patriotic, writes a new poem which says Non Nobis Domine, meaning "Not Unto Us, O Lord," should the praise be given. This new "Recessional" poem was written for a magnificent pageant celebrating England's marvelous recovery from the big war and depression and dragging in the defeat of the armada. Kipling might have written, but did not write: "Non Nobis Domine—Give the praise to our goose-like friend Uncle Sam, for without him sending us billions of dollars, and quietly accepting our default, we should not be so well off."

This great nation, as mild as a sick white mouse concerning the gigantic defaulted debts of France and England, is roaring like a first-class lion at Germany's default. It must be a great comfort to find some one to whom you dare speak plainly.

Senator McAdoo, praising President Roosevelt, says, "Rugged individualism is dying." If that were true, it would be a sad thing for the country, because some necessary things white rabbits cannot do.

If rugged individualists had died earlier, there would be no tunnels from New York to New Jersey, under the North river. McAdoo cut them there, and it was a rugged job.

And if there were no rugged individualism left, there would be no President Roosevelt. Any man able to make congress eat out of his hand, and jump through new era hoops, is rugged.

Many old men will read this with sympathy: Fred Schlund inhaled gas and killed himself in a little furnished room. In his pocket were 6 cents and this note:

"Don't try to revive me. I want to be dead. I am over seventy-four."

President Roosevelt is said to have told his subordinates, high and low, old style and new "brain trust" style, not to talk politics while he is away on his trip to the Virgin Islands and Hawaii.

The President's order is wise. If all the different brains recently and suddenly injected into politics began arguing all together some of them might contradict each other.

Before leaving, the President establishes a "steel labor board," consisting of three men, well chosen. This board will deal with the steel strike as "the national longshoremen's board" will deal with the strike of dock laborers on the Pacific coast. Employers and employees are said to have requested the accepted arbitration by presidential boards, but Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, has not spoken enthusiastically or definitely on the subject.

Double Taxation Evil

I am told by real tax authorities, can be of much value. The house committee was instructed to look into the double taxation evil that besets the country. It is known to everyone, of course, that there are places and things upon which the federal government levies high taxes and that these taxes fall on top of similar, and sometimes greater, levies by the states. Consequently, the committee inquiry may bring to light how often, and where, this sort of thing is happening.

For example of double taxation, two or three common illustrations will serve to indicate how severely the burden obtains. Take the tax on gasoline as one. The federal government laid a tax on gasoline two years ago, and that tax although it was small had to be paid by users of "gas" in addition to the state levies which run as high in some states as 7 or 8 cents a gallon, making the tax borne by that commodity aggregate as much as 10 or 11 cents a gallon in some places. The tax on cigarettes is another example, but this commodity was taxed first by the federal government and then the states put their levies on. The result is that in many states the tax on cigarettes amounts to more than the selling price of the package would be if no tax were laid.

Twenty-nine states now collect taxes on incomes of individuals or corporations, and twenty-six of them collect a tax from both. These taxes, of course, are aside from the high rates

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

First Break in Germany
The Kaiser's Praise
What Next in Germany?
Vatican Resentment

The dictatorial path of Chancellor Hitler is not as smooth as with his colleagues, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha and Stalin.

A few killings, suicides and arrests will not put an end to such violent dissatisfaction, and the world wonders what will happen next.

Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

The former Kaiser expresses amazement at Hitler's energy and strength. He says Hitler is "stronger than ever."

It is clear the chancellor does not lack strength of will or swiftness of execution. Before he had seized complete power he predicted "heads will roll." They are rolling, and Hitler's head man, Goebbels, predicts that "more heads will roll."

That the Hitler collapse is to be followed by horrible violence is only too probable. What would come afterward?

Would extreme "red radicalism" come to the front to take control? Would there be that union of Russia and Germany that many Germans advocated immediately after the signing of the Versailles treaty?

The pope's government in the Vatican resents, bitterly, and naturally, the statement that Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party in Berlin, has committed suicide. An official of the Vatican recalls that "only recently Klausener made a noble speech to Berlin Catholics, which was read with deepest satisfaction by the Vatican." The Vatican official, quoted by International News Service, adds: "We must strongly protest against the attempt to camouflage murder as suicide, since the Catholic religion forbids suicide. Militants, like Klausener, would not dream of taking their own lives."

The same official said further: "It is deplorable that, not content with killing their adversary, the brown shirts threw mud at his noble figure."

Rudyard Kipling, not as young as he was, but persistently British and patriotic, writes a new poem which says Non Nobis Domine, meaning "Not Unto Us, O Lord," should the praise be given. This new "Recessional" poem was written for a magnificent pageant celebrating England's marvelous recovery from the big war and depression and dragging in the defeat of the armada. Kipling might have written, but did not write: "Non Nobis Domine—Give the praise to our goose-like friend Uncle Sam, for without him sending us billions of dollars, and quietly accepting our default, we should not be so well off."

This great nation, as mild as a sick white mouse concerning the gigantic defaulted debts of France and England, is roaring like a first-class lion at Germany's default. It must be a great comfort to find some one to whom you dare speak plainly.

Senator McAdoo, praising President Roosevelt, says, "Rugged individualism is dying." If that were true, it would be a sad thing for the country, because some necessary things white rabbits cannot do.

If rugged individualists had died earlier, there would be no tunnels from New York to New Jersey, under the North river. McAdoo cut them there, and it was a rugged job.

And if there were no rugged individualism left, there would be no President Roosevelt. Any man able to make congress eat out of his hand, and jump through new era hoops, is rugged.

Many old men will read this with sympathy: Fred Schlund inhaled gas and killed himself in a little furnished room. In his pocket were 6 cents and this note:

"Don't try to revive me. I want to be dead. I am over seventy-four."

President Roosevelt is said to have told his subordinates, high and low, old style and new "brain trust" style, not to talk politics while he is away on his trip to the Virgin Islands and Hawaii.

The President's order is wise. If all the different brains recently and suddenly injected into politics began arguing all together some of them might contradict each other.

Before leaving, the President establishes a "steel labor board," consisting of three men, well chosen. This board will deal with the steel strike as "the national longshoremen's board" will deal with the strike of dock laborers on the Pacific coast. Employers and employees are said to have requested the accepted arbitration by presidential boards, but Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, has not spoken enthusiastically or definitely on the subject.

Double Taxation Evil

I am told by real tax authorities, can be of much value. The house committee was instructed to look into the double taxation evil that besets the country. It is known to everyone, of course, that there are places and things upon which the federal government levies high taxes and that these taxes fall on top of similar, and sometimes greater, levies by the states. Consequently, the committee inquiry may bring to light how often, and where, this sort of thing is happening.

For example of double taxation, two or three common illustrations will serve to indicate how severely the burden obtains. Take the tax on gasoline as one. The federal government laid a tax on gasoline two years ago, and that tax although it was small had to be paid by users of "gas" in addition to the state levies which run as high in some states as 7 or 8 cents a gallon, making the tax borne by that commodity aggregate as much as 10 or 11 cents a gallon in some places. The tax on cigarettes is another example, but this commodity was taxed first by the federal government and then the states put their levies on. The result is that in many states the tax on cigarettes amounts to more than the selling price of the package would be if no tax were laid.

Twenty-nine states now collect taxes on incomes of individuals or corporations, and twenty-six of them collect a tax from both. These taxes, of course, are aside from the high rates

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

First Break in Germany
The Kaiser's Praise
What Next in Germany?
Vatican Resentment

The dictatorial path of Chancellor Hitler is not as smooth as with his colleagues, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha and Stalin.

A few killings, suicides and arrests will not put an end to such violent dissatisfaction, and the world wonders what will happen next.

Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Congress took a formal adjournment a few weeks ago, but I found in roaming about the Capitol and senate and house office buildings the other day, that there are no less than eleven of its committees continuing in session, and that no less than eleven of them are conducting investigations. It is true that only a few members of each of the committees remain in attendance—the others are out campaigning for re-election—but, even so, it appears there is going to be an extraordinary amount of searching after truth, or muddling, through the heat of the summer and the cool of the autumn.

While I am not infallible in my judgment and conclusions, I must confess that I can see a valid reason for only one, just a single one, of those eleven investigations. The ways and means committee of the house has started out to do some surveying of the federal taxation structure, and everywhere I have asked I have found approval of the idea. There can be no doubt of a need for that survey, provided the politicians will accept the results of those who examined the facts, because the American taxation system, both national and state, surely is of the hit-or-miss type.

But there is another significance to the tax inquiry. I reported to you recently that it was going to cost taxpayers a total of almost $1,150,000,000 a year in interest on the public debt of the national government when that debt reaches the $31,000,000,000 which President Roosevelt has announced it will reach. Since that information was given you, further inquiries convince me the debt easily may reach $35,000,000,000 by the winter of 1935-36, and the interest alone will be correspondingly more. This is just the interest, mind you, and makes no provision for retirement of any of the debt, which would have to take extra tax dollars.

Since the national debt is so high, and going higher and the house ways and means committee is making such an intensive study of the tax system, one can not fail to link the two together. The obvious question is: is the administration becoming concerned over the sources of funds to pay the huge total of debt incurred in spending our way out of the depression?

Concurrently with the house committee's study, Secretary Morgenthau of the treasury, announced the appointment of another brain-trust group to study tax questions for him. Mr. Morgenthau holds that our tax system is full of holes, which undoubtedly it is, and he feels that the general method should be revamped so that the flow of revenue will not be so dependent upon prosperous economic conditions. To that end, the secretary sent part of the number of professors and tax experts selected by him over to England for a study of British taxation methods. British taxes apparently are much higher than ours, and Mr. Morgenthau is desirous of finding out how the British government gets away with it.

So, one hears around Washington a great deal of discussion of what the future holds in the way of tax levies upon the rank and file. Mr. Roosevelt said in his latest radio speech to the country, it will be remembered, that relief was his first consideration, that vast sums had been expended for relief and that further vast sums will be expended. All of which leads back to the observation I made above, namely, that one cannot help linking these several studies together with an undercurrent of fear that, perhaps, we are spending too much money.

While discussing the tax investigation, however, it would be unfair to omit reference to one feature of the house committee investigation that, I am told by real tax authorities, can be of much value. The house committee was instructed to look into the double taxation evil that besets the country. It is known to everyone, of course, that there are places and things upon which the federal government levies high taxes and that these taxes fall on top of similar, and sometimes greater, levies by the states. Consequently, the committee inquiry may bring to light how often, and where, this sort of thing is happening.

For example of double taxation, two or three common illustrations will serve to indicate how severely the burden obtains. Take the tax on gasoline as one. The federal government laid a tax on gasoline two years ago, and that tax although it was small had to be paid by users of "gas" in addition to the state levies which run as high in some states as 7 or 8 cents a gallon, making the tax borne by that commodity aggregate as much as 10 or 11 cents a gallon in some places. The tax on cigarettes is another example, but this commodity was taxed first by the federal government and then the states put their levies on. The result is that in many states the tax on cigarettes amounts to more than the selling price of the package would be if no tax were laid.

Twenty-nine states now collect taxes on incomes of individuals or corporations, and twenty-six of them collect a tax from both. These taxes, of course, are aside from the high rates

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

First Break in Germany
The Kaiser's Praise
What Next in Germany?
Vatican Resentment

The dictatorial path of Chancellor Hitler is not as smooth as with his colleagues, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha and Stalin.

A few killings, suicides and arrests will not put an end to such violent dissatisfaction, and the world wonders what will happen next.

Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

The former Kaiser expresses amaz