FRENCH BROAD BAPTIST S. S. CONVENTION TO BE HELD

ROWING, NOT DRIFTING

(The Valedictory Address delivered by Mrs. Geneva Moore Bradford at the commencement exercises of Marshall high school for 1935. Mrs. Bradford tells us that one distinguishing feature of the valedictory and salutatory addresses, the latter being delivered by Mr. Lloyd Slagle, was that they were absolutely original)

"It is pleasant to dream of the azure sky
Stretching away so far,
Like a tranquil ocean of choicest hue,
With never a cloud to mar,
Where you sail along in a phantom ship
With never a care to sting,
But to battle bravely the storms of life
Is quite a different thing."

Some of us may never see huge volumes of water like the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and may never sail in a ship to some foreign harbor. But each and every one will sail the sea of life.

We, as graduates of high school, are tonight crossing our first stream. To us it has seemed rough to travel, but compared with the many larger streams yet to be crossed, it has been comparatively calm. We have been students just learning to row our own boat, preparing sturdy oars that we may use to row our course in the sea of life. How are we going to sail this turbulent sea? It is more difficult to travel than any body of water. If we board the ship and let it drift with the currents, we will be carried in an unknown direction, but if we row our course with the strongest of oars we will land in the harbor that have long been cherished in our minds as being the height of our ambition.

We who have crossed our first stream in our educational career will face many agitating storms and impetuous waves as we sail further on the sea of life. Will we row with a conquering force and voyage on, or will we become discouraged and drop our oars to meet circumstantial fates? IT ALL depends upon OUR resolution. A resolute will and firm determination will go a LONG way toward carrying us upstream, no MATTER how strong the current. But if our will is weak and faltering, and our determination wavering, we will float down stream, and the stream is clogged with the multitudes of human delinquents who have not had enough vim or power to force their way upstream.

As a class of forty-five, we have tried to steer our course in the same direction as much as possible. We have worked together that our work might end in 1935, and now our high school work is over and we must, as never before in life, begin to think seriously. Think of the things we must cope with out yonder in life as we sail forward to take up our duties as citizens! We are students now, but tomorrow we shall be more. The many responsibilities that will be ours tomorrow can be taken care of intelligently if we fit ourselves now to meet them.

We learn to do by doing. We learn to surmount adversity by coping with adversity. Dear classmates, we will have many difficult problems to contend with in life. Some which it may take long hours of concentration to solve, but we must labor on and must meet every task with a determination to win.

Sometimes we may be tempted to float uselessly back and forth in the stream and think to ourselves that we can drift along and reach the coveted harbor. Then again something in our better selves tells us that we must row on with unconquerable force if we are to succeed in the impetuous course. We can never drift through life on the energy and expense of others and attain anything worth while. We must labor unceasingly if in the end our life is to be crowned with success. Those who have not already adopted the policy of doing things for themselves need to start now, for out yonder in life each of us will be compelled to depend upon our own resources to a great extent. If we have learned to do our own tasks well and not rely upon someone else we have accomplished a great deal. Doing things for ourselves is a prominent way mark to success.

The great characters in the world won their place in life by moral courage and labor. They won with odds against them. None of them ever drifted into victory, for that is impossible. They, steered for a certain harbor, and by battling courageously against adverse tides and winds and storms they won.

If we are to gain any valuable things in life we must work diligently. Work with a stable determination to overcome obstacles that come between us and the success for which we are striving.

In behalf of the graduating class I want to thank our superintendent, patrons and friends, and fathers and mothers for the help and inspiration they have given us during our high school career.

Dear principal, with sincere words I wish to say it has been your every aim to help us and push us on and as we bid farewell tonight we feel

May 5th At 2:00 P. M.

GREAT PROHIBITION PROGRAM TO BE GIVEN

The great French Broad Baptist S. S. Convention will hold its monthly session with the Corn's Chapel Baptist church May 5th, beginning at 2 P. M.

The program will be given over entirely to the discussion of Temperance, Prohibition, and Good Citizenship.

The services will begin with a song service led by E. S. Morgan, Jr., following which the introductory sermon will be preached by Robt. Tweed of Marshall, N. C. After this, five girls from Mars Hill College will deliver addresses on Temperance. Judges will be selected to judge these talks. To the girl who excels, in the opinion of the judges, will be given a silver dollar as a prize.

Hon. Calvin R. Edney will deliver the closing address on Prohibition.

The officers of the association are eager for this to be the greatest S. S. Convention ever held within the bounds of the French Broad Baptist Association. The association is depending on and expecting large delegations from Upper Laurel, Pleasant Valley, Little Creek, Laurel Bend, Foster Creek, Piney Mountain, Forks Ivy and California are now making arrangements to send large delegations to this meeting. The association is also asking Madison Seminary to send a full truck load of delegates to back up their own favorite son who will preach the introductory sermon. Madison Seminary should show its faith in this man by sending 100 delegates.

Let's do six things:

1. Remember the S. S. Convention at Corn's Chapel May 5th at 2:00 P. M.
2. Boost the program.
3. Talk up the meeting.
4. Work up a large delegation from our own church.
5. Pray for a great convention.
6. Be there ourselves.

War On Dogs In Madison County

Cattlemen in Madison County have declared war on stray dogs that for several years have been taking toll of the sheep and cattle as well as chickens and hogs. These roving dogs usually hunt in one community for several days before they are driven away. Thursday night of last week a pack of the dogs attacked cattle owned by Mrs. C. B. Mashburn, within the town limits of Marshall and wounded one of the cows seriously. Other instances of destruction of livestock have been reported within the last month. Officers have warned dog owners that they should keep their dogs at home or run the risk of having them shot.

that those encouraging words spoken by you will linger on and help us to higher goals. To our teachers, I want to say we thank you for your kind and watchful care. We shall always feel that our lives have been enriched by our daily contact with you.

We want to extend our thanks and appreciation to Mr. Ward, who has served us so faithfully and has helped us in many ways.

Dear classmates, we must not think of this parting as being a sad one. We must think of it as being a simple but sweet "au revoir" which means "till we meet again". We have both worked together and played together and now the time has come to bid farewell. Let us always cherish those sweet memories of our high school days. Tonight we launch our vessels upon the uncertain sea of life, but not alone, for around us are friends who anxiously and prayerfully watch our course. They will rejoice if we arrive safely, at our respective havens, and may we all steer our course in such a manner that we will safely reach our harbors. Row on, dear classmates, row on and on. "We're not here to dream, to drift, there's hard work to do, there's loads to lift!"
Farewell, dear classmates, farewell.
