MEASURE FARM LANDS FOR AAA COMPLIANCE

Supervisors who are checking farmers' compliance with AAA crop adjustment contracts have been instructed to measure the fields with all possible accuracy. No guesswork will be tolerated, said H. M. Ellis, state compliance supervisor at State College, and a careful note will be made of any excess acreage planted. Where a farmer is found to have overplanted his acreage allotment, Ellis said, he will be asked to remove the excess from cultivation or else forfeit his contract and all benefit payments he has received. The measurements are being made with tapes and other equipment designed to insure accuracy. The work will also be checked by experts to make sure that no mistakes are made, he added. Five recheck engineers will go out from the college soon, he said, to aid county supervisors check over the work done by the township supervisors. In cases of dispute, fields will be measured again if necessary. To satisfy the farmers that the work is being done properly, he continued, they are asked to accompany the supervisors when the field measurements are being made.

Manuel Shelton driving toward Asheville Monday night in his green Ford Roadster, which he thinks is the fastest thing in town, was passed by a 1931 Model Chevrolet coupe, much to Manuel's disgust. He caught up with the "Chevy" later on and offered to bet his Ford against $1.50 that he could pass the "Chevy". They started the race but the Chevrolet ran off and left Manuel and his green Ford far behind.

TOOTH NEWS DENTAL DIVISION NORTH CAROLINA STATE BOARD OF HEALTH N. C. Dental Society Endorses Mouth Health Teaching

By L. M. EDWARDS, D.D.S. President, North Carolina Dental Society

AS one interested in the need and value of dental health education in this State, it gives me pleasure to say that the North Carolina Dental Society has given its approval and support to the North Carolina State Board of Health in its mouth health education work in the schools of North Carolina since the inception of the activity under the direction of Dr. G. M. Cooper, a physician connected with the State Board of Health, who directed the program in the schools for a period of about eight years. Dr. Cooper laid a firm foundation for this work and it has not been necessary to change the structure of the program during these years.

The purpose of the program is one of mouth health education and this is what the State Board of Health has been doing. It has stimulated an interest in dentistry on the part of the laity that could not have been done otherwise. A natural sequence to this demonstration is that more people are having necessary dental work done than they have heretofore. The good derived from this educational program is that the public health is improved, and greater still is the preventive side of the work. Thousands and thousands of children are being taught to eat proper foods, to keep their mouths clean, and to visit their dentist for inspection rather than for correction. This being true, we are having more children come to the offices of dentists who do not require dental attention than has ever been known. However, we find that have enrolled in our schools who have yet to visit the dentist for their first time.

With this knowledge in mind, we realize that the good work of mouth health education which is being so well done by the State Board of Health is still in its infancy, and we, as dentists, are glad to offer them every encouragement, assistance, and aid in forwarding this great work and we bid them Godspeed in the undertaking. If we can have this educational work continued by the State Board of Health, and the dentists will cooperate with each other and the people in solving our dental problems, there will be no excuse for panel or state dentistry.
