KNIGHT PROWLING CAT IS DESTROYER OF WILD LIFE

Though the cat is more or less useful in destroying mice and other rodents; S. Z. Pollock, wildlife specialist of the Soil Conservation Service in Lexington, says that he is probably the greatest enemy of game and song birds.

Cats have a habit of eating eggs just ready to hatch. They delight in capturing young song birds in their nests, often just when they are ets and other pests; as well as en-acing the aesthetic aspects of farm e. Therefore, Mr. Pollock reasons, if the cat is allowed to destroy valuable wildlife, he is an enemy to erosion control.

The practice of allowing cats freedom at night and early morning enables them to hunt at the time when they can be most destructive says Pollock. Some people have the habit, he continues, of taking unwanted cats into the country in sacks and dumping them, a practice which has a vicious effect upon wildlife, as such cats are in most cases compelled to obtain their livelihood by killing and the continues named will unite in services their home.
