NEED OF A WILL

What is a will?
A will is a written document in which you state who is to own your property after your death. By it you name the persons whom you wish to benefit or protect. An executor is named in it to collect your assets, pay your creditors and funeral expenses, and in general to wind up and settle your estate.

If you make a will, you may to a very large extent designate just how your property is to be used after your death. You may, for example, give the use or income of property to your wife for the term of her life and upon her death the absolute ownership to any one or all of your children.

What is the difference between an executor or administrator?

An executor is the person a testator has named in his will as the one he wants to administer his estate. An executor is not generally required to give a bond. This is because the testator must have had confidence in the honesty and integrity of the person or else he would not have selected and named him.

An administrator is a person appointed by the clerk of the superior court to administer the estate of a decedent when there is no will. He may also be a person appointed by the clerk of the superior court when there is no executor named in the will or the person named in the will has died, resigned, or is incompetent. An administrator is required to give a bond.

Both an executor and an administrator receive a commission for services rendered.

What happens to the property of a person who dies without a will?

After the debts and funeral expenses of the decedent are paid, the balance is distributed in accordance with a rigid formula prescribed by the General Assembly. In other words, if you have not seen fit to make a will, the law will dispose of your property for you. This disposition may not be in accordance with your desires. The failure to make a will may bring hardships and added expense for your immediate family.

Read Esther 4:13-17 or Acts 10:9-15

If thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this? (Esther 4:14)

The people of Israel were threatened with destruction by Haman, prime minister of Persia. Haman hated Mordecai, a leader of Israel, because he would not humble himself before Haman. Mordecai was the uncle of Esther, who had been chosen queen by Ahasuerus, King of Persia.

In spite of this honor, Esther knew how to fulfill the desire of her uncle, Mordecai, and effect the salvation of her people. God or those that are closest to you. Occasionally a portion or all that a person owns will go to a distant relative that never knew the decedent.

The "intestate laws," which provide for the disposition of the property of persons who have not left a will, are not the same in all states. They are changed from time to time in North Carolina.

Is it cheaper to die without a will?

No. The administrator of an estate without a will has limited powers of action, whereas an executor may be given broad powers of action which will effect a substantial saving to the estate. A carefully drawn will can and often does reduce taxes and other expenses.

What is a codicil?

A codicil is a written document that amends or changes an existing valid will. It must be executed with all of the formality required of a will.

A will is not made public until after the maker's death. It may be changed or revoked at any time.

used her to save His people. Esther had come to the kingdom for such a time as this.

It often happens with the believer, for God has given us His message to preach. Through that message those living without Christ are brought to Him and He saves them. God worked so marvelously with Esther. He can work with us, too.

PRAYER

Our Father, we beseech Thee to help us to show Thy holy will to other persons around us. Help us to be living witnesses of Thine, O Lord, and thus bear fruit to Thy glory. In the name of our beloved Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Without Christ, we can do nothing; with Christ, everything is possible.

AN AGE OF SPEED

Every age has had its speciality. Fifty-nine years ago there were only four automobiles in the United States. There was one Haynes, one Ford, one Duryea and one Benz. Now there are more than sixty-two million cars and trucks in the United States. In a little more than half a century the great road systems, service stations, oil wells with all the allied industries have been developed in order that the people of this generation may go places in a hurry.

Not content with speed on wheels, thousands have taken to the air. An army may be carried overhead in a few minutes. Just how much speed may be stepped up before it reaches its limit is not known.

The laborer or workman is paid not for his knowledge but for his skill. Products are made in a hurry. Everywhere a person turns there is hurry and speed and more speed.

Remonstrating, complaining and arguing does not change the speed. Everything is based not on what was, or what ought to be or what may be, but upon what now is, and that is speed.
