this so sincerely, we are writing to you as a fellow delegate to the Democratic Convention.

"We are disturbed that Governor Harriman has been the victim of an ugly, vicious rumor, which we are sure you must have heard, and we want "to put to rest" this story for all time. It is the rumor having to do with the use of force in carrying out the Supreme Court school decisions. That rumor is completely false. Here is what Governor Harriman said at Asheboro, North Carolina: "In my own case, the present emotional atmosphere has led to accusations that I am for using Federal troops to enforce the decisions. Nothing could be further from the truth. Such a suggestion is repugnant to everything that I believe in. I have repeatedly stated that even to raise the question of using troops is irresponsible."

"Here is what Governor Harriman said he would do: "I can just think of what Franklin Roosevelt would have done . . . He would have had a fireside chat and rallied men and women of good will together to carry out this difficult decision, and then would have called together people of good will of all backgrounds and talked the thing out."

"That position is essentially the position of the other presidential candidates. It is essentially the position any national candidate must take. It is the best we can expect from any candidate who has a chance to win."

"The delegates who met and talked to Governor Harriman at Asheboro were tremendously impressed with him and his capacity to lead our country in these turbulent times."

Douglass says that an increase in pulpwood cutting was necessary and other things such as rayon, acetate, and other plastics made from The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide

Today's INVITATION

Read Luke 18:18-27

Lord, what will thou have me to do? (Acts 9:6.)

My father began to preach when still in preparatory school. Later he decided to study for the ministry. Several young men entered theological school with him. Three years later they were ordained. One graduate married a person who condemned her husband for entering a profession in which he could not make much money. She finally induced him to become a lawyer.

Forty-five years later, the lawyer asked, "Well, Charlie, how are things going?" My father joyfully related how rewarding his experience in the ministry had been. The lawyer responded, "In the eyes of the world, I have been a success — making money and attaining a position of influence. People envy me." Then, with tears in his eyes, he said, "But I'd now gladly take in exchange your glorious experience for my worldly success."

Not all of us need plan on full-time Christian service. But not one of us can afford to scorn a holy calling and substitute a selfish choice for the divine call of God.

PRAYER
Our Father, help us to put first things first. Enable us to develop a true sense of values. Lead us to decide to render Christian service in proportion to our ability and for the glory of Thy name. In Christ's name. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY
Are my time and talents counting for Christ?

of wood pulp. Douglass explains that this kind of more wood use means North Carolina farmers must do a better job of producing timber to assure a plentiful supply of material.

Take Good Care Of Your Poultry Range Shelters Each Year

North Carolina poultrymen use thousands of portable range shelters each year. Roy S. Dearstyne, State College Poultry Specialist, says that the life of these shelters is relatively short. This is due to the heavy wear and tear the shelters have to take during the year.

Dearstyne says that this is especially true of the shelter runners which are subject to lots of stress and strain if they are moved as often as they should be during the period of use. Then too, adds Dearstyne, not many poultrymen raise the runners off the ground during off seasons when the shelters are not in use. Because of this constant contact with the ground, over a long period of time, decay and rot may result, especially if the wood has not been properly treated by a wood preserver.

Whether you use wire or slatted floors in the shelters, says Dearstyne, they too may deteriorate rapidly if not properly cared for. It may well be that poultrymen can save themselves the cost of high repair and replacement bills if they plan now to properly repair and store their range shelters when they have finished using them this year.

Dearstyne adds that if the roof is not aluminum, it might be advisable to slap a coat of aluminum paint on that roof and help ward off some of the intense summer heat. A poultryman, he says, is always dealing in futures. And his success is definitely related to how far he looks ahead and how well he prepares for the things to come.

"No, I don't," answered the musician. "Hum a little of it."
