Here Comes The Bookmobile

"Bookie, do you want to write the column this week? — O.K., go ahead."

"Well, we did it. We went down Franklin Mountain on the Shelton Laurel side. I don't know why Peggy made me go, so slow. I could have taken one long breath, shut my eyes, and been at the bottom in less time than I am taking to write about it. Now I hear we are going to another new place on Thursday, June 20. I overheard Mrs. Magnolia Chandler tell Peg that the folks in Rice's Cove would like for us to come up there. Peg kept asking if it was very steep coming from Rice's Cove into Big Laurel. I kept wondering why she cared how steep it was coming downhill. It's the upgrades that get me out of breath. I love to go down, or would if Peg would just turn me loose to see how fast I can go. But no, she always slows me up so, I feel like a 'sissy.'

Not to change the subject, but Lewis Rudisill is a good boy. He said he would send his books to us by mail, and he did, right away.

School is out. I know because we made a special trip up Shelton Laurel after we left the White Rock school on Thursday morning. That road can be real lonesome looking in the winter, but during vacation time it's full of boys, girls and fishin' poles.

"Excuse me, Bookie. Is that all?"

"What's your hurry? I am just getting started."

"Bookie, when you write for a newspaper column, you are supposed to be brief and to the point."

"Have you ever heard a saying that goes like this — 'Practice what you preach?'"

"Yes, why?"

"Well, let's take time out right now, and look over some of the columns you have written. — See what I mean?"
