right in picture will carry traffic into bypass, which will follow a cut to be dug through the hillside in the background. The bypass will be 4.5 miles long and will cost approximately $1,500,000, according to State Highway Commission estimates.

Bookie and Bookie Too are now sitting side by side in Bookie's yard in Hot Springs. They seem to be getting along just fine.

Bookie sez to me, sez she, "You know, I really like Bookie Too. I didn't especially relish the idea of her coming in and taking my place. But honest to goodness, she is so friendly and nice, I just can't help liking her. Why, she isn't a bit stuck up, she is so much younger and prettier than I. Oh well, I have become reconciled to the fact that age must step aside for youth."

It sure makes me feel good to see Bookie and Bookie Too sitting out there in the yard chatting away so friendly-like. Bookie is such a dear old friend, and I like Bookie Too very much also, so it kind of worried me when I got to thinking that maybe they wouldn't get along. That just goes to show you that you shouldn't ever worry about things that maybe aren't ever going to happen. Yes, we always say — "Don't cross the bridge until you are there — and don't trouble trouble until trouble troubles you."

Thanksgiving is here. The real one. Not just one of those that Bookie and I proclaim in between times, when we are feeling extra good about something, or — — just life in general. As we count our many blessings on this, the real Thanksgiving Day, we put at the top of our list — YOU — our good friends along the route. Your thoughtfulness, cheerfulness and warm-heartedness make our job a very happy experience day after day — for which we are truly grateful. So to all of you, straight from the heart, we say — "THANK YOU."

CLOCK CAUSES SCARE

Louisville, Ky. — A strange looking box near his car, which emitted strange noises when he kicked it, frightened Bradley Coyle, 32. Inside the box was the handless face and works of an alarm clock, two containers and an electric switch. Police called a Fort Knox detonation expert, who, after investigation, said it takes more than putty, soot, wires and an old alarm clock to build a bomb.
