ROLLING ROCK BLOCKS TRAINS

A 20-ton boulder, broken loose by a dynamite blast near the Ivy River Bridge on the route of the new Marshall by-pass, toppled downhill and came to rest on Southern Railway tracks near here Monday. One passenger train, the Carolina Special, was delayed about four hours while the tracks were being cleared. The rock on the tracks was so big it had to be blasted twice before the railway's crane could move it. A freight also was held up for about 30 minutes. The blast shook the rock loose from a high bluff. It fell onto U. S. 25-70 then bounced on through a guardrail and on to the tracks.
