

VIGORO FOR TOBACCO PLANT BEDS

- Makes Stronger Plants
- Better Root Growth
- More Disease Resistant

Ponder & Ponder

HOT SPRINGS, N. C.

WEED KILLER METHYL bromide is going into these tobacco plant beds on the farm of L. W. Ammons in the Gabriel's Creek section near Mars Hill. This is done before tobacco plants are set, of course. Nine pounds of the chemical are used in a 9-by-100-foot bed. The bent sticks keep the cover above the ground while the gas is in the bed. Madison County

Farm Agent Harry G. Silvers says the gas will kill any kind of a weed seed but white clover's. There's none of that, however, in the area shown here. The covers are left on the bed for two days, then the beds are aired out for 12 hours, and then the regular canvas covers go on.

Mars Hill Home Demonstration Club Met February 18

The Mars Hill H. D. Club met with Mrs. H. C. Edwards on Wednesday, February 18. Mrs. A. W. Huff, president, called the club to order. Miss Hattie Edwards gave an interesting devotional. During the idea exchange Mrs. Hal Carter read a new recipe for Apple Salad. Mrs. H. C. Edwards reported that thirteen members' dues had been paid. The club voted to pay the dues of four absent members and to donate a dollar to the Jane S. McKimmon Educational Loan Fund. Marion Wilson,

Avoid Fertilizer Injury In The Plant Beds Now

Farmers may not realize it but tobacco plant injury can, and does result from improper application of fertilizer to the plant bed. Too high a concentration of fertilizer in the upper surface of the plant bed can do damage and destroy plants.

Many of our farmers use 160 pounds of 4-9-3 plant bed fertilizer per 100' by 9' bed and apply this to the upper surface of the plant bed. Less injury would result if farmers divided their fertilizer and made two applications; and the other half raked into the upper layer of soil.

Proper application of fertilizer will reduce plant losses and plant injury. This would result in more uniform stands of stronger and healthier plants.

A SKINTIGHT FIT IS GREAT FOR KANGAROOS BUT... NOT FOR PEOPLE IN CARS

Mercury, alone in its field, uses an exclusive body (not shared by low-priced cars). More room, more comfort, more usable space.

STRETCH-OUT ROOM FOR MIDDLE MAN On other cars, the center hump is bigger than ever. Mercury cut it in half! Here's an honest center seat with real foot room and seat cushioning.

MOVE LEGS DOWN UP FRONT FOR EVERYONE Only Mercury moved the instrument panel forward 9 inches. Three six-footers can ride in front easily and comfortably.

WIDE ROOM FOR EASYST EXITANCE Six inches more entry room lets you step in easily. Knee-shocking center seats are moved forward... out of your way.
