SELF-CONTROL AND HAPPINESS

The peace and happiness of the average citizen does not depend upon the amount of money he or she possesses, the number of organizations to which he or she belongs, or the outcome of any great social struggle.

The contentment that makes for human happiness is within the reach of every individual who is able to face life with philosophy. The acceptance and practice of religious tenets often provides the answer, whether these religious beliefs are adopted as an individual or as a member of some religious organization.

The capacity of the individual for self control, however, is the real key to happiness and contentment. It is a product that you cannot buy, or receive as a gift. It is nevertheless within the reach of all — but, oftentimes, is attained by very few.
