WORSHIP AND WORK

Memory Selection: "Jesus said to them, 'My food is to do the will of him who sent me, and to accomplish his work.'"
—(John 4:34.)

Lesson Text: Mark 9:2-50.
Today we consider the Transfiguration of Jesus and attempt to relate that high experience to present-day worship work for Christ.

From our Bible study for today we see that as Jesus approached the end of his ministry, he called some of his disciples apart. With him were his three most intimate followers: Peter, James, and John. After they had gone up a mountain, Jesus was "transfigured" before the disciples. During this experience they saw his talking with Moses and Elijah. We, ourselves, shall never be able to explain scientifically exactly what happened. It is a mystery, and such it will remain. However, we can try to understand the significance of the event as it is reported to us.

What did this experience mean for the disciples? It confirmed their earlier confession that Jesus was the Christ. They saw Jesus talking with Moses and Elijah, the representatives of the Law and the Prophets. And in Jesus' absence the remaining disciples had been ministering to the people; how they fared, in a general sense, we have no concrete idea, but from one instance related in the book of Mark, we do know that in the case of the young boy "possessed of demons" they failed where Jesus later succeeded. Jesus attributed his success to prayer. The implications of this incident and of Jesus' statement are many. First, Jesus and Mark placed the high spiritual moment and the task of service immediately together. These two types of experience were vital to Jesus' life and ministry. His relationships with God and with men were here tied together. Those who saw Jesus as heavenly Lord also saw him as servant of men. This is the nature of God's revelation.

Christian service is the expression of what we find in worship. These two are always related, but the priority is clear. Jesus indicated that worship is the necessary foundation of Christian concern. The love of God underlies and is the source of love of neighbor. These two—worship and service—are not to be separated. Each implies the other. The first commandment is to love God. Inevitably the second commandment follows, "Love thy neighbor."

The definition of the moral act or the good act is given for the Christian by his faith. We must do "the will of God." Why should we love others as God in Christ has loved us? Only because we have found the significance of that love in our own lives. Only in faith, therefore, can we know what we should do. And the power to perform the moral act is given by faith. All of us know the difficulty of doing what we know to be right. What, then, makes a man strive against these wayward thoughts and sinful dispositions? It is his trust, his faith, in Jesus Christ. It is the way of Jesus... the way of service to our neighbors. It is the willingness to do all we can for the well-being of others. This, then, means that the Christian community must be interested in the total life of men.

The Christian church must be concerned about its social responsibilities. A Christian believer is a servant to all other men. It is foolish to talk of religion as a private affair. To be truly Christian affects everything a man does. It throws one into the world with its needs and its hurts. And while, of course, we must always refer life ultimately to God, we are given tasks in the present. A Christian, like the prophets of the Old Testament, cannot sit idly by and see injustice done. He must speak out and set when the rights of people are being violated. He must be concerned with a political and economic life. As a Christian all these things are important to him. It is not enough to say we love people if we fail to demand justice for them. Love may go beyond justice, but it never sinks below it. We must be concerned about our fellow men because God is concerned. True worship entails two things: first, we wait before God. Second, we then accept our tasks and receive the ability to go to our homes, our jobs, and our neighbors with the spirit of Christ.

W. Curtis Daniel Passes Sunday; Rites Tuesday

Gross Income Of $600 Requires Return Filing

Every citizen or resident of the United States, including minor children, who had gross income of $600 or more in 1962 must file a Federal income tax return, Mr. J. E. Wall, District Director of the Internal Revenue Service for the Greensboro Office, reminded taxpayers today.

If the taxpayer's 65th birthday is on or before January 1, 1963, he is not required to file unless his gross income in 1962 was at least $1,200.

Even though a taxpayer is not required to file, he must do so to obtain a refund if any income tax was withheld from his pay.

There is one exception to the general rule. Self-employed persons such as sole proprietors, partners and independent contractors must file an income tax return and pay a self-employment tax if net earnings from self-employment were $400, or more.

Taxpayers who have questions about filing requirements may obtain Document No. 5107, "Filing Your Tax Return," by writing to their local Internal Revenue Office.
