SO THIS IS NEW YORK

By NORTH CALLAHAN

Echoes of the 100-year-old Civil War Between the States may be growing fainter, but there are still benefits from it, especially if one is a high-ranking officer or a reasonable facsimile thereof. Witness the case of John C. Pemberton III, who along with his friend, U. S. Grant III, dutifully went to Vicksburg, Mississippi on July 4 to aid in commemorating the Civil War battle which ended there a century ago. Grandfathers of these two were commanders on the Confederate and Federal sides respectively. The ceremony went well. Sitting beside the governor and Senator Eastland, John Pemberton was made an honorary general, in respect to his soldier-grandfather, a Northerner who married a Southern girl, then fought for the South.

Arrive back in New York, John realized that he was due at his New England resort home at once. He told the stewardess on his plane, she promptly went to the loud speaker and called out, "If Flight 16 has not yet left for Martha's Vineyard, please hold it for General Pemberton." The flight had left, at least to the extent of taxiing down the runway, but on hearing the announcement, the pilot reversed his engines, the plane came back, and the door was opened. "General" John Pemberton was duly ushered on board and made his schedule, much to the petulant surprise of some 45 other delayed occupants of the plane.

It seems regrettable that our country and Pakistan do not get along better. My impression of that new, little nation, on meeting its president, Ayub Khan, here some months ago, was most favorable, and it appeared that he voiced a bright, new view in world affairs, worthy of our interest and help. Now with the dealings of Pakistan and Communist China, a shadow has fallen over our relations. Let us hope that forthcoming events will untangle any web of misunderstanding and again cement the logical ties of this friend of ours in the East — where we obviously need more substantial friends — as evidenced by the going-on recently of others of our so-called friends whom we are supporting over there.

Some of my best friends are doctors, yet some of the things regarding them may some day bring on socialized medicine. For example, the manager of a store returned from a lengthy outside visit and found an angry woman customer. She complained that she had been waiting at one counter for 10 minutes. The manager recognized her as his doctor's wife. "Madam," he replied, "do you realize that I have been in your husband's office for an hour and a half — part of that time waiting for him — and I had an appointment!"

A complimentary note from Dr. Bernadotte E. Schmitt of Alexandria, Virginia, former president of the American Historical Association, saying he had read my biography of Henry Knox and had a special interest in it, because it grew up in Knoxville, Tennessee where his father was a professor at the state university. "I used to tell my students that the bane of a good style was the 3x5 card," said Dr. Schmitt. "Probably the best writing I ever did was the little textbook, 'Triple Alliance and Triple Entente' which I wrote entirely from memory, without consulting notes, although I did, after the manuscript was finished, verify quotations and dates."

Here and There: an insurance executive told me, asking that his name not be used, that insurance companies have most of the money in the U. S., that they could re-fund the national debt — and that they are charging "too much for their product" . . . a former smoker says he has stopped, and has also lost "friends" who used to borrow cigarettes from him . . . the Hotel Edison exchanges rooms for trading stamps . . . bats have had to leave the Meramec Caverns in Missouri, because they "paid no admission," according to the owner, Lester Dill . . . a New Yorker asked a Japanese businessman to give him a yes or no answer on whether he could manufacture a new product. After a moment, the Japanese replied, "Yes, we cannot make the item."

Skidding Truck Hurts Floridian

MARS HILL — A Florida summer visitor of Hendersonville was injured Monday afternoon in a highway accident near here when her car was struck by an out-of-control dump truck.

State Trooper A. L. Feldman said Mrs. Fayetta Ellsworth Stafford, 62, of Ft. Lauderdale, was taken to Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville.

Feldman said Mrs. Stafford's car was struck by a truck carrying asphalt after the truck had skidded 192 feet and slid another 66 feet on its side. He cited the driver, Edwin Leon Fisher, 31, of Hendersonville RFD 1, for reckless driving.

Fisher told the trooper that another car slowed in front of him and that one brake locked as he tried to slow down and threw the truck into the other lane. Fisher was slightly injured, and taken to the hospital, Feldman said.

THE BALE OUT FOR A SHORT HAY CROP

According to Harry G. Silver, county agent, livestock roughage for Madison County farmers has changed over the years. During the thirties cane, corn fodder, corn shucks, grass hay with little or no legume made up the major portion of winter roughage for Madison livestock. The introduction and acceptance of liming and fertilization with phosphorus through the A.A.A. and TVA changed the roughage picture to less cane, corn shucks and fodder, to grass and legume mixtures such as red clover, grass and alfalfa grass. This was an improvement of quality. The dependability of hay production for feeding high producing dairy cows or large numbers of beef cattle on a farm in Madison County is not good. Weather, insects, diseases and available land made it impossible for many farmers to count on hay for the only roughage for their cattle. Another change in roughage is well on its way in Madison. Corn silage is now the basic winter feed for dairy farmers, and is fast becoming the number one feed for beef farmers. Corn silage has the following advantages: 1. High yields per acre; 2. Dependable good quality; 3. Harvest date can be spread enough to allow farmers to harvest without sacrificing quality too much; 4. Storage area can be provided cheaply; 5. All harvest can be done mechanically.

The hay crop in Madison County is not good this year. Corn silage is near record yields per acre and the total tonnage harvest is a record high. Farmers who have gone the silage way will have no worries about feeding their cattle this year.

Farmers who are interested in solving their winter roughage problem with corn silage for next year are urged to contact the county agricultural agents office. Production, harvesting, storage, and feeding information on corn silage will be furnished any Madison farmer upon request to the county agents.
