CHRISTIANS, BE PURE!

Memory Selection: "Do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit within you, which you have from God? . . . So glorify God in your body."
— (1 Corinthians 6: 19-20).
Lesson Text: 1 Corinthians 5 through 7.

In studying our Scriptures for today, we address ourselves to the question: How do Paul's ideas that both the individuals and the religious community should be considered as temples of God apply to moral conduct today?
Last week we saw that ancient

Corinth was an unclean city. But in the midst of it the Christians were called to live pure lives. Whether twenty centuries ago, or today, the rule for the followers of Christ is: "Christians, Be Pure!"
Like the Corinthian Christians, we live in a dirty world. Filthy dialogue is heard on the stage. In spite of regulations, so-called comedians on television frequently overstep the bounds of decency. Sex and crime magazines are devoured by high school students. The sordid lives of movie idols are reported as apparently the normal way of life. The "party boy" mood competes with scholarship on college campuses. Politics are described as "dirty" and they often live up to the reputation. Advertising is often slanted toward the vulgar.

It is easy to be accused of puritanical meddling in pointing out that moral impurity, or sinful living in any form, results in physical injury. But Paul did not hesitate to tell the Corinthian Christians that they could not disregard the sanctity of their bodies. Paul was sure that the body must be kept clean as the "temple of the Holy Spirit" (1 Corinthians 6:19).

We are reminded that Jesus warned especially against the sins of the spirit. And it is true that attitudes of resentment, hate, hostility, unforgiveness and selfish ambition, destroy both personal integrity and the social order. Make no mistake about that. The older evangelists may have unduly accented the evils of drunkenness, adultery, and the coarser forms of wickedness. But we must not, in giving attention to the subtle sinful inner attitudes, ignore the persistent threat of the more obvious dangers. It is not too much to say that a human body informed with a Christian life has a better chance of being healthy than if it houses a sinful self. Paul is right: "The body is not meant for immorality, but for the Lord" (1 Corinthians 6:13b).

Should we now face some brutally frank truths about the current impurity in modern living? Some things seem frightfully old-fashioned, but they have a way of returning to remind us that we live in a world established in righteousness — a world which will not, in the long run, support actions or attitudes of uncleanness. Even if we did not have a Bible or the growing sanctions of a Christian conscience, some things are evident in human life: Loose or irresponsible sex living breeds diseases. Venereal disease is not a nice word. Nor is it a nice thing. The fact that it may be controlled by the use of powerful drugs apparently has led to a new era of carelessness. This disease against personal life clearly does not arise apart from sin. It is as if God has written indelibly into the structures of human life the certain truth that we can't disregard the sanctity of the human power of reproduction and get away with it. To date there has not been found any near equivalent for assuring stability in society to the mutual exclusive love of one man for one woman. Anything less falls short of the ideal for the home life of a Christian culture.

Alcohol is an enemy of healthy living. Alcohol is a killer. It destroys the body, the mind, human respectability, decency, and everything else which contributes to a wholesome society. Is it possible that we are being anesthetized by the current slogan that alcoholism is a disease? Of course, medical speaking, when the unfortunate victim of drink reaches the pathetic stage of helplessness designated by the term "alcoholism," it is a disease; and it must be treated with all the skill of medical science. But again, like venereal disease, alcoholism is a disease of sin. Alcohol slows up the reaction time of the human body — and thus makes the drinker a menace in the operation of powerful machinery. It weakens his powers of moral judgment. It deadens his sense of decency. And eventually it destroys human personality until it is next to impossible to recreate a stable person. How badly are the concepts of Christian living needed here!

Paul never understood the Christian life to be the function of other worldly, disembodied spirits. It was to be lived out within the rough-and-tumble struggle of a dirty world. And anything which impairs the physical strength of the Christian to that extent weakens the witness for God. Discipline living is the Christian way. Indulgence is the mark of the uncommitted life.

In Loving Memory Of

GEORGE DONALD OGLE
who was called away Oct. 11, 1963
One year ago God called for you. Said, "Come home, son, your work is through."

Your body so tired, broken and bruised you exchanged for one anew —
Pain for peace, tears for joy, in Heaven where all things are new.
You were our flower we so dearly loved;
You bloomed with love for all.
You still are our flower, so pure and mild;
You bloom beyond the wall.
God needed a flower, a bouquet to make;
The prettiest flower he always takes;
He picked you from our garden of love
Forever to bloom in heaven above.
Yes, you went first and we remain To face the lonely hours.
Soon God will call for us to come And join our lovely flower.
Oh how we miss you and our hearts Do yearn for your old time step and the glad return.
No, you will never return, it's true;
You watch and wait for us to come to you.
We will never forget you, Donald, dear.
We are so lonely without you here. Your smiling face, kind words so true —
They are sweet memories left for you.
The Pearly Gates swung open wide When Jesus said "Just step inside."
In your new home you watch and wait For us to meet you at the gate.
How your leaving hurts us none can tell;
It's just goodbye, and not farewell. We're coming, too, in the by and by.
To join you in that home on high. Sadly missed by your father and mother, George and Nellie; four brothers, Frank, James, Robert and Ronald.

HUNTING REGULATIONS FOR 1963-1964

Raleigh — Tar Heel hunters will have a greatly simplified squirrel season this fall. At a meeting of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission held in Raleigh last week, 99 counties were included in a uniform squirrel season, beginning October 15 and ending January 1. One Dare County township, Atlantic, and part of another—that part of Nags Head Township east of Roanoke Sound—will have a shorter season, lasting from December 2 until January 15.

The decision for the state-wide season was based on research which showed that Tar Heel squirrels produce twice a year, usually in March and July. It was also found that very few of the March broods are around for the gun season in the fall, while the July crop furnishes most of the fall hunting. All across the state, most of the July squirrels are weaned by the middle of October. Biologists believe that since the nirod's gun is only one of the several factors in squirrel mortality, the hunting should begin when the late crop has left the nest. This will give the sportsman more hunting that previously has been lost because of food shortages, inclement weather, and predators.

Hunting regulations, such as the new squirrel season, are decided upon only after a series of nine public hearings across the state. At these hearings, the Commission presents its proposals, based on sound biological principles and careful research. Hunters, landowners, and other interested parties are invited to attend these hearings, discuss these proposals and express their own opinions. Having aired their proposals, and heard the reaction of hunters across the state, the Commission assembles in Raleigh with the staff of Clyde P. Patton, Executive Director of the Commission, and sets regulations designed to give hunters the best possible harvest and assure a supply of game for the future.

Another change is the wild turkey season. Still gobbler only, but running from January 2 to February 15, this new arrangement, though shorter, gives the turkey hunter a better chance to enjoy his sport with less of his favorite game being taken by the relatively non-specialized squirrel and deer hunters. This group, in prior years, has been "incidental turkey hunters", bagging a good many turkeys when they were out looking for their game. But with both deer and squirrel hunting ending January 1, there should be very little "woods" hunting after this date except by turkey hunters. And with a $100 fine for killing a turkey out of season (passed by the 1963 Legislature), a fellow will think twice about shooting at a "movement in the bushes" before January 2.

The quail and rabbit season will open on November 23 and close February 15. While closely approximating the opening date for '62, it falls on the Saturday before Thanksgiving. Perhaps our noble nimrods will have burned off some of their lust for the smell of gunpowder by Thanksgiving, and the family get-together and the traditional Thanksgiving meal can go off on schedule.

Bow hunters will again be permitted to hunt during the 20 days immediately preceding the open season for a particular game species. However, where the deer season opens on November 18, the 20-day bow season will begin on October 18 and close November 9. Before we all go Robin Hood, let's remember that a bow must have a rated pull of at least 45 pounds. Arrows, except the blunt head type used for small game and birds, must have a minimum broadhead width of at least 3/8 inch.

Since county laws govern some of hunting and trapping, it would be impossible to cover the whole list of regulations in this limited space. Better get a copy of the new regulations—they'll be off the press soon. Your local hunting and fishing license dealer will have a supply. Get one and read it. You'll be glad you did.
