IT'S NOW UP TO US

The future success or the absolute failure of the Economic Opportunity Act to benefit our county is now squarely up to us, the citizens of Madison County. The responsibility of this mass cooperative effort was clearly pointed out last Monday at the lengthy meeting at Western Carolina College when experts, both state and federal, spoke plainly and clearly just what we must do to apply for the program.

If we are to realize the benefits from EOA we must put aside all selfishness and differences. We must truly, and in good faith, forget political differences and work in a unified manner if we expect to realize the many possible benefits of EOA.

It is going to take the very best minds to formulate a satisfactory program for which to apply. This is not a "give-away-program." It is a program where we do for ourselves. Too, for the program to get off the ground it is going to take the efforts and interests of all. It isn't a program where we are told what is best for us. Rather, it is a program where we decide what is best for us. It's a fair program.

As progress is made this newspaper will try to keep its readers informed. We have an opportunity — let's see if we are adult enough to take advantage of it.

THEY KNOW HOW

Our hats are off to the Hot Springs Lions for doing a splendid job at sponsoring the two dedications last week-end. To have the responsibility of one dedication takes a great deal of time and effort but to sponsor two elaborate dedications on consecutive days is a double responsibility. And in this case, a wonderful job on both occasions.

Too, we would be remiss if we failed to commend the wives of the postal personnel for preparing and serving refreshments at both occasions.

And to the many others who assisted and cooperated in making both dedications outstanding, we say — congratulations.

Who Won County's Jurybox Jousting?

By DOUG REED

Raleigh — The Madison County jury commission fight appeared to be all but over Tuesday night.

Sen. Clyde Norton said he will accept House amendments to a bill he supported when it is sent to the Senate Wednesday.

He will offer two amendments: One would clarify the apparent conflict in the immediately effective date contained in the bill, and in a June 1 effective date in amendments made by the House.

The other would require an immediate purge of the present jury box and a fresh start with a new jury list.

The real question Tuesday night was who won.

The ultimate answer may not be known until the new jury commission has been in operation for a time, but political answers were not immediately apparent.

Although Norton would have preferred a jury commission named ex officio rather than an appointed one, he said Tuesday night he has "the utmost faith and confidence in Judge J. Frank Huskins." He said "I am sure he will fulfill the trust placed in him by the North Carolina Legislature."

Despite the fact that Norton's four-man ex officio commission was replaced in the House by a three-man judicially-appointed one, he had by all odds won a major political victory.

Without his fight, the present one-man system almost certainly would have continued in existence and remained a cause of unrest in the county.

The jury commission issue has actually been a fight for political survival by Democratic factions led by Zeno Ponder, his brother, Sheriff E. Y. Ponder, and Madison Democratic Chairman Liston B. Ramsey.

They too got something of what they wanted in the House action Tuesday.

They succeeded in retaining a feature of the jury commission which they had made their paramount concern — that the resident judge appoint the membership.

In writing this provision into the bill the anti-Norton Democrats showed considerable strength in the Legislature. Judging purely by the 57-51 vote by which they won, they had more House strength than did Norton.

But the real winners in the dispute may well be the people of the county who, according to the Norton forces, had lost confidence in their courts.

PROCLAMATION 1966 - CROP WHEAT MARKETING QUOTA AND ALLOTMENT

The USDA has announced the proclamation of a national wheat marketing quota of 1,292,000,000 bushels and a national allotment of 47.8 million acres for the 1966 crop of wheat as required under the provisions of wheat legislation now in effect. This proclamation is required to be issued prior to April 15, 1966, in the absence of new legislation for the 1966 crop year.

Current law requires a marketing quota proclamation whenever wheat supplies are apt to be excessive within a quota. In making this determination, total supplies, made up of a 1966 crop without quotas or other program, plus the carryover, would exceed utilization by 1,128,000,000 bushels, which would be excessive.

In the absence of new legislation for the 1966 crop, a referendum would be held by law prior to August 1, 1965, to determine whether or not wheat farmers favor or oppose marketing quotas for 1966.

The voluntary wheat program currently in effect applies only to the 1964 and 1965 crops of wheat. Congress currently is considering new legislation to continue this program on a voluntary modified basis. This would eliminate the mandatory marketing quota provisions, and hence there would be no referendum.

Under the law's formula, the 47.8 million acre national allotment for the 1966 crop is the acreage needed to produce the national marketing quota at 129,200,000 bushels, after considering underplantings and other factors as well as small farm increases which tend to be offsetting.

The law also provides for a small farm acreage increase as for the 1964 and 1965 crops. This would increase the national allotment about 4 million acres for a total national effective allotment of approximately 52 million acres.

Under marketing quotas, penalties would be assessed for excess production when acreage allotments are exceeded. The law in effect also provides for penalties if acreage between the former 55 million acre minimum allotment and the announcement national allotment is not diverted to conserving uses. It also does not provide authority for payment for land retirement.

No announcement is planned at this time on support levels, national reserves, State and county allotments, and domestic and export allocation percentages as authorized by legislation now in effect. Should no new legislation be enacted, these provisions will be announced prior to the referendum.

CALIBRATE YOUR SPRAY WITH CARE

The first thing you need to determine is the miles per hour you will be traveling on your tractor in the field. This is done by measuring the time in seconds it takes you to travel the 300 feet, at the speed you will be spraying it. Multiply the number of feet (300) by .682 and divide the sum by the number of seconds required to travel the 300 feet; this gives you the miles per hour at the throttle setting you will be spraying. The next piece of information you will need will be to calculate the nozzle discharge. This can be done by fastening a pint jar under one of your nozzles on your boom, then running at the rpm's and pressure setting that you will be spraying at, timing the number of seconds it takes that nozzle to fill the pint jar, divide this number of seconds into 7.5. This gives you the gallons per minute of your nozzle. Now you can determine the gallons per acre. With this formula 5940 x the gallons per minute per nozzle divide by the nozzle spacing in inches (the distance in inches between nozzles x the miles per hour of your tractor.) This will give you the number of gallons per acre that your pump is putting out. You simply mix the amount of material to be sprayed in this number of gallons and then, being sure that you keep your pressure and your speed constant, you are ready to spray your field, Fred Boss, Extension Agent, said.
