HEARD AND SEEN By "POP"

Sometimes my mind wanders — please don't say WHAT mind — but, anyway, I was wondering the other day what's become of marbles — I haven't noticed boys with pockets full of agates, glassies, steelies, chalks, etc., in years — goah, when I was a kid I walked around with a pocket full of marbles — that is, when I hadn't lost them — if the kids of today haven't experienced a few fights caused by "fudging", they've missed a great deal — I can still recall rusty, bruised knuckles — just couldn't get those hands clean during marble season — and that was summer-long — and what about "leap-frog", "Baby-in-the-cap", "One and Over", and "Kick-back" when football season would come — somehow, I feel the kids of today are missing a great deal of fun — also, in reading The State recently I came across a snitch I didn't know, as follows: A Cherokee myth is that a Dawkka (monster fish) lived in the river at Hot Springs, and therefore they called the area "Dawkka Place". The Indians also considered much of Madison uninhabitable but they preserved it for their hunting ground. Also I have never thought much about why dimples were in golf balls — well, here's why: Those dimples in your golf ball have great aerodynamic implications. A perfectly smooth ball would dip and wobble in flight like a swallow chasing insects. The 336 shallow indentations not only keep the ball on course, but also add distance. Tests have shown that a ball with dimples ten thousandths of an inch deep will carry twice as far as a ball with dimples only two thousandths of an inch deep. — S o — there's going to be a wedding in the Marshall Baptist Church tonight (Thursday) — sorta quiet, simple wedding which involves one Virgil Smith, Jr. — old Virgil has served his time in the Army — now he'll start another kind of time — serving his wife — I hope — I had to agree with the judges Saturday night in the Miss Universe contest — from the five finalists, I, too, thought Miss Apasra Hongsakula, of Thailand, was the prettiest.
