Zeno Ponder

"the eight precincts," Huff said. He charged that Ponder, who served as temporary chairman at the county convention, arbitrarily set aside precincts in which the reform Democrats appeared to have an edge in the close contest. "In other words, Mr. Ponder set himself up as a one-man grievance committee." In one instance, involving complaints from Laurel precinct, Huff said Ponder never took any action at all.

Huff said there are two Democratic women's clubs in the county — one at Marshall and the other at Mars Hill — and that Ponder refused to distribute votes in the executive committee between the two club presidents as required by the Democratic Party plan of organization.

Huff also told the committee that the Ponder faction, or regular Democrats, refused to allow these the use of the secret ballot at the precinct meetings.

"If the secret ballot is good enough for electing a president and a vice president, it should be acceptable for electing precinct officials," Huff said.

Ponder told the committee that the records of the Madison County Democratic executive committee show that a permanent ruling was adopted five years ago saying that all Democratic precinct meetings in Madison County would be conducted by a standing vote or head count.

"Which would eliminate all possibility of fraud and put the count in the category with Caesar's wives, completely above suspicion," Ponder said.

Ponder told the credentials committee that he did not want any special treatment for the Democratic Party of Madison. "We were 104 years leaving the Republican Party to join the great Democratic Party of this state, and we only ask that we be given fair, impartial and honest judgment by each of you."

The committee said that it found that Madison had not followed all rules set out in the plan of organization, but that the protested action would not materially change the structure of the county Democratic Executive Committee.

SPILED PILLS

A friend of mine, who is about 25 pounds overweight, went to his physician for some reducing advice. The doctor wrote out a prescription and also gave him a bottle of little blue pills. "These are not to be swallowed," he directed the patient. "Spill them on the floor several times a day and then pick them up."
