The pill is not enough

By PAUL HARVEY
The pill is taking hold. The baby boom is over. The number of preschool children in the United States has declined sharply—15 per cent in 10 years.

But our nation's population is increasing otherwise, and nobody wants to talk about that.

Do you know one thing that I think is slowing down the baby boom? The school controversy.

Most students of population variations credit the pill for reducing our nation's preschool population from 20 million in 1960 this year.

Or they mention that big families are going "out of style."

But you hear so many young people express reluctance to bring babies into all this social turbulence and schoolhouse ferment, I figure that's also a deterrent to procreation.

But it's not enough to curtail the birthrate if we continue to leave open the immigration gate.

I know this is a supersensitive subject with some ethnic groups, but the whole population consideration is sensitive.

It stomps on the toes of a lot of mighty decent Mormons, also, when they threaten to cancel "family day" at Utah State Fair because some student groups insist that "giving prizes for unchecked fertility is unpatriotic."

The consideration of family planning is repugnant to traditional Catholics.

So if we can dare to affront fundamental religious convictions, then we can dare to slam the door on this endless immigration invasion.

I've been trying for weeks to determine how many outsiders are continuing to come into the United States each year and I can't.

There are so many "categories" of legal admissions and there are so many coming in illegally that it's impossible to compute precisely.

But we do know that there were 373,328 legal immigrants admitted during 1970. And there were 4,431,880 temporary admissions—many of whom manage some way to stay permanently.

Our nation welcomed with open arms the ancestors of us all. Now even to suggest closing the door to mass immigration must surely cause old Lady Liberty's torch to flicker.

And maybe we shouldn't. Maybe we should continue to jam more millions into our already bankrupt cities and face starvation when it comes.

But if the ecologists are correct and if the situation is so desperate that a Nobel laureate says we should pay morons $30,000 not to have babies because if we don't their offspring will cost us $250,000...

If the situation is such that American families must be limited. Then the situation is now sufficiently desperate so that we should close the immigration door on any more.

Bacterial canker and other tomato diseases may be reduced in 1972 by giving the old tomato fields a good cleaning this fall. All vine, string, and other materials should be raked and burned. The stubble should then be turned under to eliminate a place for disease organisms to live during the winter.

The active gardening season is over. And those leftover dusts and sprays used to control insects and diseases this summer will not be needed until next year. All empty containers should be destroyed in a way that will prevent children and pets from getting to them. Materials to be saved for next year should be gathered together in one large container. Mark it "POISON" and store where it cannot be reached by children or pets. Wettable powders and liquid concentrates will keep from one season to the next. Dusts are inexpensive and should not be kept for use next season.

EGG FACTS
Eggs are on the plentiful foods list for October with production expected to be slightly above the year-ago level. In order to be sure of getting quality eggs buy graded eggs at a market that keeps them in refrigerated cases. The USDA and NCDA grade marks give assurance that the eggs have a specific quality at the time of grading.

Portions of government-marked eggs are marked to show both quality and size.

FHA Rally At Mars Hill Saturday

More than 1,000 high school girls from the 16 westernmost North Carolina counties will participate in a District 8 Future Homemakers of America rally at Mars Hill College, Saturday (Oct. 16).

The girls, from grades 9 through 12, will take "Accent on Action—Discovery, Involvement, Growth" as their theme for the day-long session.

In addition to hearing reports, listening to special speakers and electing new officers, they will be entertained by the college with a variety of activities.

The college Stage Band will give them a musical salute; the Drama Division will perform excerpts from its current production "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown"; the English Department will show them a specially selected color film; and college coeds from the Department of Home Economics will conduct them on guided tours of the campus.

Also, the college cafeteria will host them for lunch.

In attendance will be girls from 45 FHA chapters in the high schools of Mitchell, Vance, Madison, McDowell, Rutherford, Polk, Buncombe, Henderson, Haywood, Transylvania, Clay, Jackson, Graham, Swain, Macon and Cherokee counties.

Schools in these counties which do not have an official FHA chapter have been invited to send representatives.

Mary Diercks, senior at Mars Hill High School, is president of the district and state FHA secretary. She will preside over the rally.

Has any insurance company yet offered a policy covering the collision of worlds? If not, it's something to think about.
