Housing Meeting Slated For Next Tuesday

Attention all home builders, developers, electricians, plumbers, and supply dealers! The French Broad Electric Membership Corp. and the Madison County Extension Service invites you to a supper meeting at The Madison Grill, Tuesday, Jan. 11 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the county housing situation.

According to the U. S. Census Bureau, about 70 per cent of Madison's housing is substandard. At this time, there are Federal Loan Programs available to remedy much of this situation. For instance, the Farmer's Home Administration in North Carolina, a prime rural lending agency has been awarded $100 million to loan low and moderate income families for homes. According to Eldridge Hill, County Farmer's Home Administration Supervisor, many of the families eligible for these funds are not taking advantage of these excellent low-interest loans to obtain adequate housing. The Farmer's Home Administration can also help finance land for housing development.

Special guests will include Ron Baker, director of Industrial Services, from the Tarheel Electric Membership Association, will speak on the increasing role of the electric co-ops in housing.

Woodley Warrick, Extension Housing Specialist, will discuss the keys to rural housing development and Extension's contributions to housing in North Carolina. Paul Laughrun, Western District Farmer's Home Administration Supervisor, will be on hand to discuss the Farmer's Home Administration's Program and to answer any questions the builders might have.

"This meeting is crucial if the building industry is to join hands in an attempt to improve the county's housing conditions. All builders, etc., are encouraged to attend and participate in this meeting. So let's throw down our hammers and come out to the supper meeting where we can get down to business on the ways to solve our housing problems!" Mr. Hill said.
