

PAT FRANKLIN, of Marshall, has been appointed by Danny Thomas to serve as campaign chairman for the ESA Million Dollar Bike Ride in Madison County on June 21.

Beta Club To Sponsor Bike Ride June 21

The Million Dollar Bike Ride will involve some 70,000 riders over 500 communities across the nation.

A coast-to-coast caravan of riders will be given a farewell party June 30th on national television with Marlo Thomas, star of ABC television series "That Girl," leading the way. The caravan will depart from Washington, D. C. on July 3 and will travel westward stopping in as many cities as possible to add local bike ride returns to a growing fund. The national bike ride will terminate on the West Coast where a check for the total amount raised across the nation will be presented to Danny Thomas.

"We hope that young and old will join in this great humanitarian project. This is an opportunity for everyone to get actively involved in helping to build a better world. Children being treated at St. Jude really need our help," said Mrs. Franklin.

The ride is part of a nationwide event being sponsored by Epsilon Sigma Alpha, women's international service organization, to raise funds for the renowned research institution founded by entertainer Danny Thomas. The hospital, which celebrated its 10th anniversary this year, is best known for its significant advances in the treatment of childhood leukemia.

Volunteers will be asked to ride at least part of a ten-mile route and to solicit the sponsorship of community citizens who are willing to pledge a contribution for each mile ridden by the volunteer.

Burwell, County Health Head, Adds Additional Post

Lawrence B. Burwell, formerly assistant director of the Buncombe County Health Department, has officially assumed the duties of executive director of the newly formed Area II Board of Mental Health, serving four Western North Carolina counties.

Under the new mental health organization—formed in accordance with action taken by the 1971 General Assembly—Buncombe, Madison, Mitchell and Yancey counties have become the third of 42 service areas of the State Mental Health Service to be established in the state.

As executive director of the new board, Burwell will have directorial responsibilities for the 250-bed Area II unit at Broughton Hospital as well as responsibilities involving programs for patients from the four counties at Western Carolina Center at Swannanoa and the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center at Black Mountain, as well as some responsibility for the Alcoholic Information Center here. Burwell said development of the area concept is so new that operational details of this nature have not been finalized.

Burwell also is director of the Blue Ridge Community Center on Biltmore Avenue, where he makes headquarters. The center formerly served the four counties now covered by the Area II organization. Its board of directors has now become an advisory board, Burwell said.

Mrs. Joseph N. Murphy, chairman of the Area II board and formerly chairman of the Blue Ridge Community Mental Health Center board, said the new concept will make it possible to greatly strengthen the mental health program in this area.

The Madison County Board of Education announced this week that construction contracts for Madison County's new consolidated high school has been finalized and construction will start immediately.
