Reed is a World War I veteran and is retired from the Trailway Bus Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed have six children, fourteen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Engagement

Mr. Jack Smith of Route 7, Marshall announces the engagement of his daughter, Brenda Smith to Randy Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson of Route 4, Candler.

Miss Smith is a 1973 graduate of Marshall High School and is employed by the Marshall Army Store.

Mr. Wilson is a 1970 graduate of Enka High School and a 1972 graduate of Asheville-Buncombe Technical Institute. He is employed by Carolina Enterprises of Asheville.

The wedding date is set for October 20 at Long Branch Baptist Church.

Youth shall be served, says the American Footwear Institute, and to that end there's a whole catalogue of casual foot attire to warm the Rockies of the young at heart for back to school. Included is kooky fun footwear that snubs its toes and has a heel of chunks of cork and wood or stacks of leather.

New evening sandals for fall and winter dazzle in silver, copper and bronze. They are next to nothing strips of satin.

Do your own thing with home lighting

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) — In-home lighting, as in so many other things today, it's "do your own thing."

You shouldn't worry about what's being done. Do what pleases you, says Ruth McClintock, who heads the New York showroom of Bruce Industries, Inc., maker of contemporary lamps.

There are just two points to keep in mind. First, the basic function is illumination. And second, your lighting should help to create an environment, and be the frosting on the cake, as it were, to enhance your furniture, walls and ceilings.

Working within these two premises, the young executive says, you can achieve effective and attractive lighting based on your own ideas.

Some random suggestions: If you feel you need light at either end of a sofa, it does not necessarily require matched table lamps. Use a table lamp and swing (chair) lamp, with both at eye level.

Big lamps lend drama to a room, but the bigger the lamp, the smaller the room will appear.

Another way to introduce excitement into a room is by using the bare-bulb look. These bulbs have a built-in non-glare feature and are functional as well as decorative.

How many lamps in a room? A good guideline is five lamps in a 12 X 20-foot room, Miss McClintock says. Another guide is to provide at least one lamp for every seating group.

Miss McClintock's suggestions on which lamp for what use:

For dens, play groupings, study areas — wall lamps or swings.

For game rooms and limited space areas — pole lamps.

Other great space savers, she suggests, are tree lamps with two and even three lights, and functional floor lamps that also provide small table top space, magazine holders and various functions in addition to lighting.

For bedrooms — headboard lamps.

For dining areas — chandeliers for the traditional room or, for the more casual dining area, the same effect can be achieved with ceiling pulley lamps.

If you do want a chandelier, Miss McClintock recommends, use it in concert with wall scones and include a dimmer to help create a variety of moods.

The two most common faults in lighting planning, according to the Bruce executive, are the two extremes: not enough light and too much light or light flooding.

The remedy for the first is simple: Provide more illumination.

The second: Rearrange your light spacing. Use dimmers. If the lighting still is harsh, soften the effect with one or two more traditional lamps.

One final word of advice: Don't buy all opaque lamp shades since they do not transmit the maximum amount of light. Brighten the room with translucent shades or the bare-bulb look.

What are the most popular lamp materials?

Wood and acrylic. Miss McClintock says. Wood is much sought after today and has actually become a semi-precious material. Acrylics are staples in today's contemporary homes. Both are durable and easy to care for.

Decoration

There will be a decoration at the Forster Cemetery on the Doe Branch Road next Sunday starting at 2:30 o'clock.

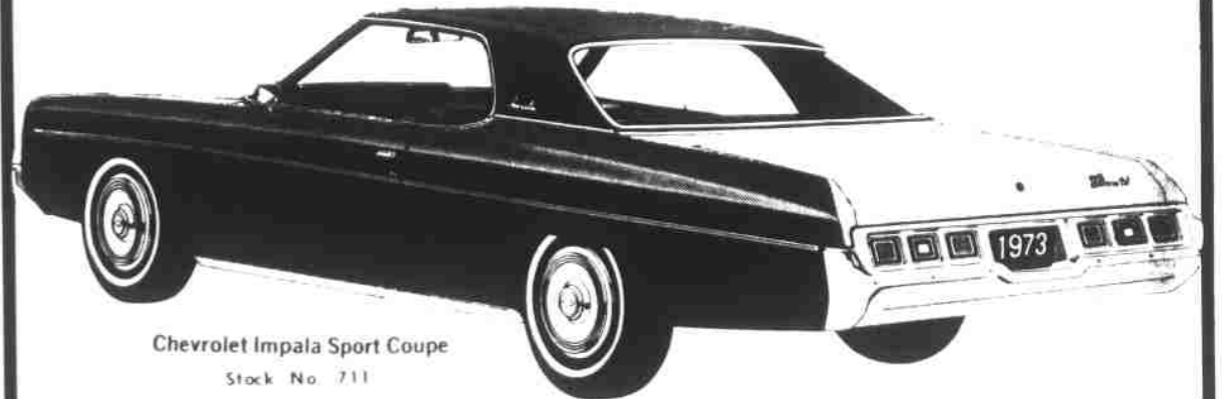

All those having relatives and friends buried there are urged to be present.
