Magic Tricks

The Paper on the Wall Trick

"I can make this paper stick to the wall without using nails, glue or sticky tape."

What to do:

Hold a piece of paper against a flat wall. Size 8½x11 will do fine. Rub the side of a pencil rapidly against it while you count to 120 slowly (about 2 minutes). Now take your pencil away and let go. You might want to have a contest with several friends to see whose paper stays the longest.

Super Sport: Dave Cowens

At first, some experts thought Dave Cowens was too small to play center in the National Basketball Association.

But they soon realized they were wrong as Dave won the Rookie of the Year honors the first season, the Most Valuable Player award his second season.

Today, the hustling, 6-foot, 8-inch Boston Celtic pivotman is recognized as one of the best players in pro basketball.

Dave usually ranks among the league's top rebounders and scorers. In five seasons with the Celtics, he has a career scoring average of 19.1 per game.

Before joining the mighty Celtics, Dave was an All-American at Florida State University. Success came to Dave largely because of his tremendous dedication and willingness to work.

Dave plans to farm when he retires from pro ball. He already owns a 30-acre farm near Newport, Kentucky, where he grows Christmas trees and raises livestock.

The Colonial Times

Meet Crispus Attucks (1723?-1770)

The American colonists did not like British taxes. On March 5, 1770, they yelled and threw snowballs at the British troops. The soldiers shot and killed several people and wounded others. Sam Adams called it a "massacre."

One of the leaders of the patriots was a man called Crispus Attucks. He was killed by one of the British soldiers.

Not much is known about him. Some history writers say he was a black. Others say he was an Indian. There was a statue erected in his memory in Boston in 1888.
