Organization Is Improving Community

The Mars Hill Community Development Organization had its regular quarterly business meeting on Tuesday, March 28, at which time new officers were elected and installed, and committee chairmen presented their annual reports and projected plans for 1977. The theme of the evening was "Organizing Citizen Power" in building a better community. The meeting was well attended and the group voted approval to a continued commitment to the major projects of beautification, community planning and development, securing an adequate facility for the public library, and cooperation with the town Recreation Committee on its youth program and plans to prepare the recreation park for use this year. The group endorsed plans to reorganize a 4-H club in the community. They also voted to enter the county beautification contest and the Western North Carolina Community Development Contest. The Executive Council met on April 15 and made plans for initiating these decisions.

Beginning on April 2, the Beautification Committee has sponsored a weekly roadside clean-up, in cooperation with the county-wide efforts. A large group of adults and children, including members of the Mars Hill Civic Club, participated in the project. Roads and streets from a junction with Bull Creek workers to Highway 19-23 were cleared of cans and trash. Continued cleaning will be undertaken on a regularly scheduled basis, by groups and by individuals who have volunteered to take care of specific areas.

The Beautification Planning and Development Committee has already begun preparations for planting a number of special areas. More extensive plans for landscaping, painting of public buildings, and of street paving are in the making.

On Saturday, the Finance Committee sponsored a bake sale, benefits for the public library fund. The sale was quite a success and the committee wishes to express its appreciation to all who helped to make it so. This sale was the first of a number of money-making projects to be undertaken this spring and summer.

Marshall Club Met Monday

The Marshall Book Club met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. J. L. McElroy.

Before the program Leon Uris's book "Trinity" and Bob Terrell's program on "Communication" at Mars Hill College were discussed.

Mrs. John Corbett reviewed Adam Smith's "Powers of the Mind." She dwelt much on Smith's theory of the importance of the way we perceive the world — our pattern of thought, a shared set of assumptions. He holds that the western mind thinks things seen are real and things not seen are less real. She also touched briefly on Smith's experience with EST, Zen, Arica, LSD, Biofeedback, Rolfing, Sufism, TM, Esalen, Yoga, and Iching. The Washington Post Book World has said that "Adam Smith is the perfect Virgil—witty, pragmatic, learned — to lead the doubting reader into the shady realm of consciousness expanding. He has tried himself with a tough skepticism and an intelligent open mind."

Members present were Mrs. Leonard Baker, Mrs. O. A. Gregory, Mrs. W. J. McKinney, Mrs. Clyde Roberts, Mrs. Jim Story, Mrs. Corbett and Mrs. McElroy. Guests were Mrs. Vera Kosmodel and Miss Gayle Isensee. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. McKinney with Mrs. Gregory as program leader, May 16.
