Fight

Riddle said his car ran out of gas and he stopped to use a telephone. The phone was out of order, and he struck at a flower pot with a baseball bat, destroying it. He then crossed the street and sat on a bench, "wriggled around a bit" and the bench broke.

Judge Ginn asked Riddle who had destroyed the other six flower pots and the second bench. Riddle said Flynn had destroyed those.

Riddle was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail, suspended for 18 months, with supervised probation. He was also ordered to contribute $100 to the Mars Hill Community Development Club within 30 days, and contribute 30 hours of community service work within 120 days.

Flynn said he had tried to contact the leaders of the club, but wasn't sure who to call.

Flynn was sentenced to 14 days in the county jail on the fighting charge. He was also sentenced to six months in prison, suspended for two years with supervised probation on the charge of destroying property. He was also ordered to pay court costs make a $100 contribution to the Community Development Club.

In addition, Judge Ginn ordered Flynn to consult with the Blue Ridge Mental Health Service and to refrain from carrying any deadly weapon, including a baseball bat.

In other cases, William Brown pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possessing a controlled substance as part of a plea bargain agreement. In return for the plea, a felony charge of manufacturing a controlled substance was dropped.

Sheriff E.Y. Ponder said that he found about 60 marijuana plants at Brown's residence. Brown said when he moved into his house, he found some seeds and planted them to see what would grow.

Brown was sentenced to two years in prison, suspended for two years with supervised probation. He was ordered to pay court costs and a $300 fine.

Dallas Roberts and Clyde Rathbone both entered guilty pleas to a charge of breaking, entering and larceny. They were charged with breaking through a rear window at the Southern Railway signal building in Marshall on June 29 and stealing $400 in equipment, including a chain saw and some hand tools. $278 of the equipment was later recovered.

Both men were sentenced to two years in prison. All but 60 days of the sentence was suspended and both men were ordered to serve supervised probation. They were also each ordered to pay $147 to Southern Railway.

Bonnie Johnson Metcalf pleaded guilty to assaulting Luther Metcalf, her father-in-law, and to trespassing on his land. Metcalf said he had warned her to stay off his land and said Sheriff Ponder had also warned her to stay away.

The defendant admitted that she had assaulted Metcalf by pushing him into a ditch twice. She said she wanted him away from her car.

She was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail, suspended for two years with unsupervised probation on the condition she pay a $50 fine and the court costs. She was ordered to stay off Metcalf's land unless she had written permission from the owner and to not assault him in the future.

As she was walking away, Bonnie Metcalf was saying something to an unidentified person, and the word "hell" was audible. Judge Ginn ordered the sheriff to take her into custody until she paid the full amount of her fine.

Paul Gillis pleaded guilty to assaulting Kristy Burleson of Asheville, the wife of his grandson, Russell Burleson. The two had argued over the welfare of the Burlesons' young child, which the Gillises had cared for for some time. Gillis said he had slapped her on the back of the head.

The judge issued a prayer for judgment and ordered Gillis to pay court costs. Judge Ginn ordered an investigation by the Buncombe County Department of Social Services into the welfare of the Burlesons' child.

Joe William Griffey was found guilty of non-support of two children presently in the custody of his wife, Virginia W. Griffey. She said they had been separated about two months and that he had never given support, even when asked.

Judge Ginn issued a prayer for judgment until Aug. 1, and directed the parents to contact the Madison County Child Support Enforcement Agency to find out how much money the children would need and how much the parents could contribute to the children's welfare.

Mary Rice pleaded guilty to a charge of assault. She was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail, suspended for one year and was placed on unsupervised probation. She was also ordered to pay a $50 fine and court costs and $100 for her court-appointed attorney.

A charge of assault was dismissed against Louise Rice, Mary's mother, who had broken up the fight between her daughter and Sherry Blankenship. Also dismissed were three counts of welfare fraud against Sheila G. Worley, a charge of assault against Ola Brown and related charges of assault against Cheryl Ann Cantrell and Robert Clay Cantrell.

Orders for arrest for failure to appear were taken issued for Johnny C. Dewese, Donnie Jackson and Gladys Williams.

Judge Ginn ordered Wilburn Powell to submit to a breathalyzer test when he suspected that Powell was in court in an intoxicated state.

Powell appeared in court intoxicated at an earlier date when facing a charge of driving while intoxicated. He was later convicted on the charge. His appearance in court on Thursday was the result of his failure to perform the necessary hours of community service as required by his original sentence.

"I'm no banking expert. It takes a load off my mind to have my Personal Banker."

"I try to figure out the best way to save and get the most out of my money. Sometimes I need somebody to say, 'Yeah, that's a good idea,' or need them to think of something that might be better in the long run. My Personal Banker does that.

"Like once, I had done some research on money markets and cash investment accounts, but I didn't know enough to make a decision. My Personal Banker helped me make up my mind,

"It's a lot like talking to a friend. When I'm ready to do something, I can just call her up or stop by her office. That makes for a growing relationship where you can build confidence and trust.

"My Personal Banker and I are working together to get the most out of my money. It's like a partnership."
