ies recommended for initial surveying, according to Frank Gatton, assistant state archivist, no one has yet taken up the project.

"It really isn't that difficult a task," Gatton said, "and can be done by any group or individual."

Though the Department of Archives recommends the formation of a local committee to oversee the project, one is not necessary, as evidenced by the efforts of the Greater Ivy Community Center.

"It does need an ongoing effort," Gatton said, "one that is best kept going by a local forum that knows the area."

Dillingham added that if the county can get one member from each of its eight or nine community development organizations, they could easily form the basis of an ongoing committee.

Copies of the North Carolina Cemetery Survey can be obtained at the Madison County Public Library or the News-Record office in Marshall; and at the Rural Life Museum or the Appalachian Room in Mars Hill. Gatton says it is not necessary for those filling out the survey to know any of the topographical coordinates, such information can be gathered at a later time.

"What is most important is that we have the cemeteries registered with the state archives so we can protect them," Gatton said.

Dillingham suggests that all completed surveys be returned to any of the four locations, so copies can be made for the public library's records. Librarian Lucille Roberts has put together a notebook identifying some of the Madison County cemeteries.

"I believe it was George Bernard Shaw who once said 'How we treat the dead is a clear indication of how we treat the living,'" Dillingham added. "Out of this effort we put forth here is going to come a great benefit for many generations to come who have their roots here in Madison County."

Body Of Missing Weaverville Man Found In Tenn.

Three Are Charged With Murder

The body of a 40-year old Weaverville man missing since Sunday was recovered Tuesday afternoon by police officials who dragged Lake Boone near Johnson City, Tenn. Bobby Joe Hensley of Chadwick Wade Dr. was found about 2:30 p.m. by divers near a bridge which crosses the lake.

Police officials say the body was found wrapped in blankets and weighed down with cinder blocks. Hensley had been shot once in the head. Tennessee officials speculate that Hensley's death may have been related to a drug deal. The dead man was an Asheville city employee and a Buncombe County Auxiliary sheriff's deputy.

Police began a search for Hensley on Sunday when a car registered in his name was found on an unopened section of Interstate 181 near Elizabethton, Tenn. Family members had not reported the man missing until Sunday, thinking he had gone to Lake Boone following a domestic dispute.

Three men have been arrested and charged with murder in connection with the death. Two of the suspects, George D. Humphreys, 33, of Elizabethton and Allen R. Hodgkinson, 25, of Washington County, Tenn. were arrested on an unrelated charge early Sunday morning in Washington County. The men were originally charged with possession of marijuana and possession of a stolen handgun. Humphreys was also charged with DUI.

A police check of the .357 Magnum revealed that the gun was registered to Hensley. Police later arrested Richard Jones of Johnson City. Jones was transported to Washington County where he was also charged with first degree murder. The three remain in the Washington County Jail today without bond.

Funeral arrangements for Hensley were incomplete as we went to press.
