Symphony To Perform At College

The North Carolina Symphony will perform a pops concert at Mars Hill College on May 4 to benefit the college's current $10 million "Campaign for the Future."

The concert will also be a homecoming of sorts, as the founder of the orchestra, Lama Stringfield, is an alumnus of the college. Stringfield won a Pulitzer Prize in 1928 and founded the statewide symphony in 1932.

The symphony will be in Western North Carolina May 3-5 on one of its educational tours and will play for Madison County school children May 4 morning before performing that evening in Moore Auditorium. The 68-member orchestra performs between 165 and 190 concerts each year. This October it received high praise from the critics for a concert in Carnegie Hall featuring the music of Robert Ward, honoring the Durham composer on his 70th birthday.

James Ogle, associate conductor, will lead the orchestra through a program of American favorites including selections from "Oklahoma" by Richard Rodgers, Aaron Copeland's "Hoedown," "Evergreen" from "A Star is Born," and others from Henry Mancini, Morton Gould and Leroy Anderson.

Ogle has been associated with the symphony since 1974, when he won the first Young Conductor's Competition. He also won the Malko International Conducting Competition in Denmark that year. He has been associate conductor since the 1978-79 season.

Proceeds from the concert will go toward new facilities for the Continuing Education Center. The building housing the current library will be refurbished to provide 35 double-occupancy rooms for continuing education program visitors. Conference and classroom space as well as offices will also be provided in the renovated building.

Plans call for the library to move to the current cafeteria, which will also be renovated, and new cafeteria will be constructed.

Tickets for the concert are $8 for adults and $4 for children under 15. Tickets are available at the door, the Music Office in the Fine Arts Building, Accent on Books in the North Asheville Shopping Center, the Opportunity House in Hendersonville and Pollard's Drug Store in Burnsville.

For additional information, contact Raymond C. Rapp, director of the Center for Continuing Education, Mars Hill College, Mars Hill, N.C. 28754, telephone 689-1166.
