

Dr. Reese Steen Honored At Convention

A Mars Hill dentist was among 67 honored as Masters by the Academy of General Dentistry during its annual convention in Chicago.

Dr. Reese Steen was named to the honor after completing a program that included qualifying first as a Fellow by passing 300 continuing education credits within a 10-year period and passing a comprehensive examination, then completing an additional 600 credits, most of which were under the supervision of an instructor.

Steen studied the Keyes techniques for diagnosing and treating gum diseases under the man who developed the techniques.

Steen received undergraduate and graduate training at UNC - Chapel Hill.

Steen was the first in his textile mill family to earn a college degree and credits a high school teacher with steering him to the health profession. He said he had a poor image of dentistry until exposed to the dental school as a patient.

"I realized that dentists could be sensitive, compassionate people," he said.

Steen moved to Madison County with his wife, Lynn Oliver, in 1972 with the intention of returning to graduate school within a couple years.

Instead, he remained in the county, first with the Hot Springs Health Program and later on his own in Mars Hill.

Steen is a member of the Madison County Board of Commissioners.
