I know of husbands and wives who pruned together regularly and closely, but their marriages ended in divorce. They tried everything they knew, but nothing worked for them. Yes, the old adage has merit if we dare explore its depths. Perhaps habits deep in the old saying's seed is hidden meaning. People who pray together CHANGE regularly and, people who CHANGE regularly STAY together. If we believed that "prayer changes things" regularly by changing people who change things, then it would be certain that married couples change. And if they do not change together, they ultimately go in different directions. Change never. It is not the changes that drive the partners or marriages, but rather the way they deal with them. Begin by praying together before you go to your church or synagogue.
