"Let Me Live in a Home By the Side of the Road."

(Sam Walter Foss, the New Hampshire poet, was tramping in England on a hot summer day. He had ascended a long, steep and tedious hill. Near the summit he passed a little house very close to the side of the road. After he had passed he observed a sign that read: "Walk in and take a cool, refreshing drink." He followed the path to a shady nook where he discovered a sparkling, cool, flowing fountain. Just above it hung an old-fashioned gourd dipper. After refreshing himself he looked about and saw a basket of fruit upon the bench nearby, and over it the words, "Help yourself." As he thought upon it, he returned to the house by the side of the road to inquire the meaning of it all, and was told by the old couple who lived there that they had had an ambition to do something for the world that would make it better. But as the years passed they were unable to make more than a bare living upon the poor farm, and thus they saw that life would pass and they would not be enabled to do anything of real value to the world. They then decided that they would do what they could and thought of this cool spring of water and invited the weary traveler to refresh himself. And from that time the first apricots that ripened until the last autumn apples were picked, the basket was kept full and each was invited to help himself. As Mr. Foss pursued his journey, he reflected, and then composed the lines:)

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn
 In the place of their self-content;
 There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart,
 In a fellowless firmament;
 There are glimmer souls that blaze their paths
 Where highways never ran—
 But let me live by the side of the road
 And be a friend of man.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road
 Where the race of men go by—
 The men who are good and the men who are bad,
 As good and as bad as I.
 I would not sit in the scorners' seat,
 Or hurt the cynic's ban—
 Let me live in a house by the side of the road
 And be a friend to man.

I see from my house by the side of the road
 By the side of the highway of life,
 The men who press with the ardor of hope,
 The men who are faint with strife,
 But I turn not away from their smile
 Nor their tear—
 Both parts of an infinite plan—
 Let me live in a house by the side of the road
 And be a friend to man.

I know there are brook-gladdened meadows ahead
 And mountains of wearisome height;
 That the road passes on through the long afternoon
 And stretches away to the night,
 But still I rejoice when the travelers rejoice,
 And weep with the strangers that weep,
 Nor live in my house by the side of the road
 Like a man who dwells alone.

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
 Where the race of men go by—
 They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
 Wise, foolish—so am I.
 Then why should I sit in the scorners' seat
 Or hurt the cynic's ban?
 Let me live in my house by the side of the road
 And be a friend to man.

Again Dunn has done herself proud. Her third celebration of the Nation's birth was no less a big day than were the two former similar events, and that in spite of the fact that its territory is in the throes of the worst depression it has ever experienced. For one day, farmers and business men, their wives, their children—all were made to forget their worries and tribulations and gather here for a joyous celebration of the one hundred and thirty-ninth anniversary of American independence. And they all had a big time; their presence was inspiring, and their enjoyment was so genuine that those men who had worked to make the celebration possible must have felt repaid thereby for the effort they had made.

After many delays that handsome structure which is to house the First National Bank at Broad and Wilson streets has finally been completed, and, in a few days, the institutions' offices will be moved from their present quarters into it. Many times in the last year the Dispatch has remarked upon the beauty of this first really fire-proof building in Dunn standing with its four stories so proudly above its surroundings, but it was not until now that its magnificence could be fully appreciated. With all scaffolding removed, surrounding piles of debris carted away, windows washed clean, wood and brass trimmings polished; with its perfect architectural symmetry and its pretty shaded brick and stone, it can be truthfully said that no Carolina city can boast of a more attractive business building than it is.

The Johnson Brother great sale is being continued through this week and will end next Monday. The Messrs. Johnson are making every effort to dispose of the bulk of their present stock before moving into their new store in West Broad. Every item in their store is marked at price which is bound to appeal to the economic sense of those to whom they seek to sell. During the run of this sale they have disposed of about $10,000 worth of goods, but their stock is still much larger than they care to move into the new building. If, among Dispatch readers, there are any persons who have not taken advantage of the remarkably low prices now prevailing, such persons should not let the opportunity afforded by the continuation slip without profiting therefrom. The same price applies to credit as well as to cash sales.

A delightful Book Party was given to the younger set Thursday evening by Mrs. Elia Goldstein for her niece, Miss Dorothy Brill, of Augusta, Ga. Those enjoying Mrs. Goldstein's hospitality were Misses Annie Wade, Elizabeth Thompson, Sadie Pittman, Florence Cooper, Rosalie Hooks, Eloise Godwin, Ruth Westbrook, Lucille Howard and Dorothy Brill. Messrs. Geo. Grantham, J. J. Wade, Edwin Lee, Willie Newberry, John Clifford, Paul Newberry, Edwin Cooper.

To raise cotton and send its princely revenues to the West for supplies, and to the East for money, would be misfortune if soil and climate forced such a course. When both invite independence, to remain in slavery is a crime. To mortgage our farms in Boston for money with which to buy meat and bread from Western cribs and meathouses, is folly unparalelled.—Henry W. Grady.

Twelve Things to Do in July.

Plan now for that vacation and picnic after the crops are laid by.

2. Keep up the law, shallow cultivation; don't lay by with a turn plow.

3. Use the farm cleaning outfit to put up all fruits and vegetables that might otherwise go to waste.

4. Study health conditions surrounding your family, and prepare to avoid malaria and typhoid.

5. Keep the garden going by planting late corn, tomatoes, beans, turnips, mustard and rutabagas.

6. Avoid senseless fodder pulling by planting plenty of forage crops.

7. If you did not save your own seed it is none to early to begin getting clover seed prices from responsible dealers.

8. Put peas in all corn at the last cultivation.

9. There is still time to plant the stubble land; don't neglect it.

10. Make every edge out by planning how to market your crops cooperatively this fall.

11. Plan for a county or community agricultural fair.

12. Build a site, if you have more than a down cattle to winter.—Progressive farmer.

known. The products are being jumbled up by the warring nations at any price they choose to charge, and they are in a position to denounce Democracy must cater to the riches of these sections; it has no hold upon them as it has upon the South. The South has been so unselfishly loyal to Democracy—true to its principles, so absolutely united in its allegiance—that it has never been considered good politics to hood its citizens for help.

The South has worked faithfully and waited long. Can it look to Mr. Wilson for reward?

AT SMALL COST YOUR HOME CAN BE INSURED AGAINST WIND STORMS AND YOUR GROWING TOBACCO AND COTTON AGAINST DISASTROUS HAIL STORMS

THE HOME OF NEW YORK, THE BIG COMPANY OF $6,000,000.00 CASH CAPITAL AND OVER $18,000,000.00 SURPLUS TO POLICY HOLDERS

On the 7th of May, it seemed to us all that Providence was lowering the clouds only just in time to bless our labors in planting, that same Providence visited many sections of the Carolinas with terrific wind and hail storms, in many places completely destroying crops and demolishing dwellings and barns. At Manning, South Carolina, a portion of the business section of that town was practically wiped out. At Burlington, Sanford, Lumberton and Raeford the destruction was unprecedented. Even at our own door in the Little River Section of Harnett County, giant oaks were twisted off and uprooted and buildings demolished and crops damaged.

This same Providence has placed it within our power to protect our finances against these unpreventable disasters. Should you avail ourselves of the opportunity left to us through the mercy of the hand of Providence in passing us over another time and protect our credits with Hail and Tornado Insurance? Merchants as well as farmers should be interested.
