The Debt to "Empire."
It seems but yesterday that we took an almost personal interest in the news that the author of "Barack Room Ballads" of "Plain Tales From the Hills," of "Soldiers Three" and "The Man Who Would Be King," and all the other stuff with the high ring of inspired youth upon it—had a son!
"Ten pounds of boy," Kipling is said to have cabled, and we dreamed dreams for the youngster. What adventures would he have in the new days, what strange places would he live to picture for all the world, to what extent would he inherit the father's magic touch of description and understanding? Of course, there could not be another Kipling of the young days in India. Kipling himself has outlived the younger man of those days but another Kipling was something to watch and think upon.

Now, somewhere on the far-flung battle line, there is perhaps a grave, or something even more ghastly between the trenches, that is all that is left of Kipling's hopes and those of the world that had a right to expect something out of the ordinary from Kipling's son.
It is grim tragedy and yet fateful logic that the Poet of Empire should sire for the comfort of his age the youth to be flung into the red maw of the glories he sang.
Indeed, with so many thousand sons of simple mothers and fathers who have nothing to do with empire dying all about him, one may suppose that the young Kipling felt as he charged some mystic whisper of "noblesse oblige" which only his sacrifice could satisfy. — Raleigh Times.

Mr. Herbert McClammy has made up his mind to enter the race for Congress in the Sixth district, after having had the matter under consideration since last spring. That makes two for New Hanover, and it is to be said that both are good men. The Lumberton Robesonian told us the placid bosom of the political waters of the Sixth congressional was due to be disturbed shortly by a ripple, and from now on we shall expect the commotion to be more or less pronounced.—Charlotte Observer.

Trade Follows Good Roads.
A town which wanted to grow reached out with good roads and just about ruined a town in a county that had a system of mudways running to its trade center. The town in the unprogressive community had 19,000 inhabitants, and now it is a city twice the size of the other. Trade follows good roads. We have seen it do it.—Wilmington Star.

Home Sentiment.
A London paper offered a prize for the best definition of home. Here are some of the answers sent in:
The golden setting in which the bright jewel is "mother."
The world of strife shut out; a world of love shut in.
An arbor which shades when the sunshine of prosperity becomes too dazzling; a harbor where the human bark finds shelter in the time of adversity.
Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.
Home is the person's estate obtained without injustice, kept without disquietude; a place where time is spent without repentance, and which is ruled by justice, mercy and love.
A grand old mirror through which both sides of us are seen.
That source of comfort which youth does not fully appreciate, which the young men and maidens lovingly desire, which the middle-aged generally possess, which the old rightly value.
A hive in which like the industrious bee, youth gathers the sweets and memories of life for age to meditate and feed upon.
The best place for a married man after business hours.
Home is the cosiest, kindest, sweetest place in all the world, the scene of our purest earthly joy and deepest sorrows.
The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.
The place where the great are sometimes small and the small are often great.
The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.
The jewel casket containing the most precious of all jewels—domestic happiness.—Ex.

A Thought for the Week.
There are days * * * wherein the world reaches its perfection; when the air, the heavenly bodies and the earth make a harmony as if nature would indulge her offspring; when everything that has life gives signs of satisfaction and the cattle that lie on the ground seem to have great and tranquil thoughts. * * * The air is full of birds and sweet with the breath of pine, the balsam-of-Gilead and the new masts. Night brings no gloom to the heart with its welcome shade. Through the transparent darkness the stars pour their almost spiritual rays; man under them seems a young child and his huge globe a toy. The cool nights bathe the world as with a river and prepare his eyes again for the crimson dawn.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Right You Are.
How to "Check the Waste" is phrase that needs to be carried into the consciousness of every individual capable of thinking.
So long as housewives are carefully indifferent as to the cost of money in which their pantries are supplied; and so long as mothers allow daughters to drift along unscrupulously indifferent to such things as a working knowledge of foods and food values and comparative costs of supplies, just so long will there be reckless waste and needless expense connected with the food problem at each home.—Miss Elizabeth Kelly, Southfield Herald.

Inamunity for Johnston.
The anti-typhoid campaign just closed in Johnston county was in some ways the most satisfactory one ever conducted. Over 95 per cent of those beginning the treatment in July have received the full immunizing treatment of three doses. More enthusiasm has been manifested and more faith and confidence in the treatment have been expressed than ever before. More co-operation on the part of the medical profession has been received than ever before. The aid received from public officials and from the Press of the county has been greater than

HAUSEWIVES AND TUBERCULOSES
Occupations Furnishing Greatest Number of Tubercular Patients.
Of 162 patients treated for tubercular germs at the State Sanatorium last year, it is noticeable that of this number 31 were housewives and 23 were farmers. The next highest numbers classed according to their occupations were 14 students, 10 cotton mill operators, 8 merchants and 7 store clerks. The number of males was 106 and of females, 57. The number married 82, single, 69 and widowed, 11.
The 31 housewives were 58 per cent of the number of female patients at the Sanatorium. Overwork might be assigned as the chief cause of their presence there. Overwork that brings on worry, indigestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and finally a general breakdown is probably the greatest factor predisposing to tuberculosis, and housewives seem to fall easy victims to the disease through this channel. The same cause, with lack of fresh air and proper exercise, might also account for the large number of students, operators, merchants and clerks who were also patients.
But the large number of farmers is somewhat puzzling. Farm life is usually regarded as a fresh air life, even tempered, and altogether healthful. Theoretically it is but as it is practiced by most people it is not. Sitting and sleeping in a closed, ill ventilated room from six in the evening to six in the morning one half of the time and the half that needs fresh air most, is not altogether ideal from a health standpoint. Modern sanitation ideas pertaining to farm life have not as yet been widely accepted and the importance of disease prevention is just beginning to be felt. It is evidently of the utmost importance that the knowledge of the spread and prevention of tuberculosis be speedily carried to the country districts.—State Board of Health.

LEARNING TO WALK
The Anglo-French loan of $500,000,000 would not be popular, else provision would not have been made for offering it in amounts so small as one hundred dollar pieces. That brings it within the reach of all investors. And the terms are attractive enough to make them seek it. The security is unique. A loan preferentially guaranteed principal and interest by Great Britain and France, the two richest nations of Europe, hitherto the world's principal lenders and now for the first time borrowers abroad, is absolutely safe. There is nothing more to be said on that point, unless to remark that if it is not safe, then no security is safe, and value are meaningless.
The secondary aspect in which a safe security may be regarded is that of its return to the holder. The buyer of these five-year Anglo-French bonds at 98 will receive 5 per cent per annum interest and at the maturity of the loan he will be paid off in cash at par, unless he elects to take a long term bond instead. That is to say, for $98 now invested one will receive during five years $25 interest and $100 at maturity, a total of 125. That makes the "net" annual return a fraction better than 5 1-2 per cent on the only external loan of Great Britain and France, for the repayment of which they pledge severally and together their credit, faith, and resources. It will undoubtedly be "a popular success." Nothing like in the form of an investment has ever been offered before in this country. The American investor is not accustomed to buy the securities of foreign governments. This is his beginning, the first great adventure of the United States as a creditor nation.
