SERVING ONE'S COMMUNITY

(Smithfield Herald.)

There is a great need for a larger comunity service everywhere. The exigencies of the present war situation are going to bring the people his seventy-five cents for nity cents closer together and make them see and then sold the pawn ticket for closer together and make them see the great value of co-operative work. The people are going to be brought to see each others' needs in a broader and more emphatic manner. They are also going to be brought to see lar, who lost the difference?— Virtheir larger responsibility in the life ginian-Pilot. of the community. They are going to see some of the things that need to see some of the things that need to be righted and they are going to see that these things cannot be righted unless they take part in it. They are going to see that the community in which they live is going to be no better than the individuals make it.

If there are amusements of any kind in the community that ought not to exist the people are going to learn after a while that these things are not going to be driven out unless they take a part. They are going to learn after a while that the newspaper and the preacher are not going to be able to regulate the community life by themselves. Before these things are done the people must be brought to realize that they have just as big a part to play as any one else. If there are evils existing in our midst the folks must realise that they are going to continue to exist until a majority of the right thinking people in the community band mselves together to put out these izen of this town felt disposed to criticise the movies. There happened to be something about the movies that he did not like just at that time, so he called on the editor to "jump on the business with both feet." He was asked by the scribe if he allowed his children to attend the movies. On answering in the affirmative, the editor's business to regulate every editor's business t oregulate everything that came along, but that it was the duty of the home to keep the children away from movies if they were objectionable. If the home no power to control the child how can it expect the preacher and the teacher and the editor to regulate the community?

The home is the base and it is there that all real reforms start. And the reform that starts elsewhere is doomed to failure in the beginning. The laxity in the homes of today i going to bear a harvest of dragon's teeth in years to come. The nation itself will never be any stronger than the home. FOUR RULES FOR A GOOD SPORTSMAN

When you plan a game slways ry and wish to win, otherwise your pponent will have no fun, but never tot be happy without it.

2. Seek to win only by fair and swful means according to the rules f the game, and this will leave you rithout bitterness toward your oponent, or shame before others.

3. Take pleasure in the game ever though you do not obtain the victory; for the purpose of the game is not merely to win, but to find joy and strength in trying.

4. If you obtain the victory you have so desired, think more of your good fortune than of your skill. This will make you grateful and ready to share with others the honor bestowed upon you, and truly this is both reasonable and profitable, for it is but little that any of us would win in this world were our fortunes not better than our deserts.-Henry Van
