Nearly 2,500 bales of 1917 cotton had found its way to market here up to noon today. Monday's prices closed a little above 23 1/2 cents, but yesterday most of the local offerings were bought at 25 cents and above. The staple is coming to Dunn now at an average of about 200 bales a day. Pickers are much in demand and scarce. Ginners are having all they can do to keep up.
William L. Core, son of W. F. Core, has been promoted to corporal in the 322nd regiment, National Army. "Bill" was among those ordered from Harnett week before last. He is the first of Dunn's selected men to be promoted.
The State Bank and Trust company displays a chart showing the fluctuation of cotton prices for the last ten years. This year prices have been higher than at any time during the period, and have covered a wider range. 1916-17 prices have ranged between 14 and 28 cents. The closest approach to this year's prices was in 1910, when they bear 20 cents was the highest mark reached.

A citizen suggests that the town detach the sad remnant of "Old Glory" that still waves from the water tower and substitute a new one. He says, too, that when a new flag is raised it should be so arranged that it could be lowered at sundown and raised at sunrise, with all the dignity due such an event. To leave the nation's emblem flying 24 hours a day in all sorts of weather is not showing due respect.
Uncle Sam takes care of the soldier until he falls, wounded or ill. Then the Red Cross assumes the burden under the direction of the Government. It is to help the sick, wounded and suffering that the Red Cross labors. When you help Red Cross you may be helping your own son or brother who falls in France. Local headquarters are in the First National Bank building. You can render personal service or contribute funds there.
H. H. Draughon, of Falcon, was here recently telling of a particularly brilliant shooting that passed over his neighborhood late in August. Mr. Draughon says that it was different from most phenomena of this kind in that there appeared to be two stars—one at each end of a stream of light six feet wide extending east and west clear across the sky. Mr. Draughon says it appeared near 2 o'clock and that despite a very bright moon it was unusually brilliant.
The Harnett county council of defense has been instructed by Governor Bickett and Adjutant General Laurence Young to arrange for the formation of Harnett county's unit of the State home guard. Fifty men are to be chosen for the guard of this county and the armory is to be at Lillington unless Dunn and Duke interests can persuade the governor to establish it at this end of the county. Charles Ross chairman, G. M. Tilghman, W. P. Holt, N. A. Patterson, W. H. Gregory, James A. Buchanan and J. G. Shaw comprise the Harnett county council.
Duke's Creek Community Fair will be held Thursday, October 11. Extensive preparations have been made for the staging of Harnett exhibits and for the entertainment of hundreds of visitors. Joel G. Layton and R. P. Marshbanks are among the prime movers in this undertaking and Joel G., with characteristic vim and energy, has left no stone unturned to make the occasion a success. Will McArtan has been named chief marshal and he will be assisted by 14 assistants. Every citizen of Harnett is privileged to compete in exhibits. Every citizen who can find the time should attend, says Mr. Layton.
For fear that you may not have noticed it, the Dispatch reminds you that it is carrying "some advertising this week; and, at the same time, it suggests that you read these ads. The present is a time when folks must make every dollar cover as much ground as possible. The advertising merchant always has something on the fellow who doesn't advertise—he has better goods, better values, more bargains. He tells you about them through the columns of a newspaper because he hasn't the time to button-hole you and spin a verbal yarn into your ears. Advertising keeps him busy. Being kept busy brings him money. The more money he gets, the better is his credit and the larger is his buying ability. This gives him prestige with the manufacturer—they stumble over each other to get his trade. Result:—he gets his wares more cheaply and sells to you more cheaply. Nothing could be simpler. Find the moral.
