"Oh, you Helland Wooden Shoes," was the newspaper headline in a recent caption welcoming to the stage, "Hands and Fritz," the newest of musical comedies based on famous newspaper cartoons. "Hans and Fritz," is a stage version by Frank Kenedy of the sucruciatingly funny R. Dirk's cartoons, after which the new hilarity is named. Everything in the way of artistic detail is said to be found regardless of cost, in the newest Dirk's conceit.

Leo Edwards and Will Cobb have written the incidental music, Frank Kenedy has written the liberatos, and Frank Tannehill has rehearsed the company, including fair bevies of attractive chorusters who sing and dance their way through the play's three acts. The local engagement is announced at The Metropolitan for Saturday night.
